It must be a source of considerable annoyance to the enemies of President Wilson to discover at this late date that he is not pro-British. It really appears, after all, that the president and the entire Democratic administration throughout the war were only pro-American. This is very disconcerting; for was not the administration looked upon by the Republicans as being a branch of the British government? Why, most assuredly; and furthermore, the Republicans have consistently refused to ratify the treaty of peace and the league of nations covenant because of alleged undue consideration for the rights of Britain.

Senator Smoot, of Utah, and the others of his ilk, display their usual narrowness in a marked manner when they object to the placing of the names of Lee and Jackson in the Arlington memorial. Not that Lee or Jackson would care to be there, if it were left to them, but if greatness is a requisite to a place in the memorial, there are none more deserving than these southern heroes. One day the Smoots and Maddens and others of this kind will deplore the fact that the blind south will remain solid, and the next will make asses of themselves by speeches like they recently made on the south. Of course the south is solid and will remain so as long as the north and west will recognize pin heads as representative of the north and west. It is the north that makes the solid south solid. Nobody but an ignoramus or a fool would make statements like those made some days ago in congress.

We do not exactly follow the reasoning of Vice President Marshall that a representative in congress should vote for what he considers the best interests of the people regardless of the wishes of his constituents. This statement is credited to the vice president in regard to the censure by the Southern Baptist convention for his remark that if they had been voting behind closed doors not more than twenty senators would have voted for prohibition. There is no doubt in our mind that prohibition was enacted because congress considered that the people demanded it, and not because the senators personally favored prohibition. We do not think it any reflection on the senate for voting as the senators thought the people would have them vote, neither can we see any reflection on Mr. Marshall for saying so, although we do not agree with his position in the matter. The vice president explains, however, that he does not use liquor himself, does not serve it in his home, and would be very glad if nobody else used it.

It appears that the Republican investigation of presidential candidates' pre-convention expenses will act as a boomerang. There appears to be no doubt about it that the investigation was born in a spirit of vengeance—trying to "get" something on the Democratic party. So far the only slush money that has been found—and there seems to be plenty of it—is in the Republican party. Particular attention has been given, however, to a rumor that McAdoo was spending ten million dollars to get he nomination. Instead of getting in behind the ten millions, the investigation has disclosed, apparently, that McAdoo has not spent a cent; in fact has forbidden the spending of money on the part of his friends, and further that he has steadfastly refused to seek the nomination. Money, however, has flowed like water for General Wood and Governor Lowden, and Senator Johnson has spent a trifle—a couple of hundred thousand or so. Wood's expense account, so far ascertained, is a million and a quarter, and Lowden's well over half a million. That the Republican candidates are trying to buy their way into the white house certainly is the way it looks. Will the American people stand for it? Maybe. They stand for a whole lot some times, but it appears at this time that the Democrats have the edge on the presidential outlook. The Republican candidates—the leading ones—are already set to cut one another's political throat, and a split seems certain. If the Democratic cards are played well, the game is theirs.

Bamberg 6, Barnwell 0.

Ellis Smith, formerly of the Columbia club of the South Atlantic league, made his debut in the Tri-County league Tuesday afternoon, pitching in a Bamberg uniform against Barnwell, and easily shut out the latter team 6 to 0 at Rhoad park. Smith was never in danger and was master of the Barnwell team at all stages, only one man reaching third and he couldn't even throw a fright into the locals. Smith walked one man, allowed four widely scattered hits, two of which were very, very scratchy, and caused 13 Barnwell hitters to strike where the ball wasn't. He was well received by Bullock, who caught a nice game, and each batter man poked out a peach of a hit in the pinches, driving in runners, Bullock's going for two sacks. It was simply a case of too much Smith, and this boy in his first effort sure appears to be a honey. But while Smith was pitching himself to the heights of glory it must also be said that his mates gave him gilt edge support, not an error being recorded against the home team. And at the same time Bamberg garnered no less than 12 safeties from the delivery of one Eddy, who was trying to pitch for Barnwell. At least Umpire Burch announced before the game that he was going to pitch, so we'll give him credit for trying, although if anybody ever told him he could pitch they were either humoring him or making fun of him.

Lack of space forbids a review of how the runs were made, but good batting accounted for most of them.

Hale and Price look best for Barnwell. The Bamberg team hit well individually and collectively. Dudley Sanders, playing his last game of the season at Rhoad park, put up a fine exhibition, while the perfect stops and rifle shot pegs of "Gyp" Rentz at third were beautiful to look upon. If this boy plays 1111 games this summer he might make a couple of errors, and he goes after all of 'em too. The one feature, however, was the twirling of Smith. He worked like a Trojan all the way, and especially in the ninth did he cut them loose with a string of fire behind them. He not only has a job, but a home with the local fans, who welcome him and his estimable wife, a Columbia girl, to the citizenship of Bamberg. Max Burch alone handled the indicator to the entire satisfaction of the Barnwell team, and this fact alone is a sufficient recommendation to warrant a try-out for him on the umpire's staff of the American league. The league leaders, who have now shut out every team in the circuit, play in Barnwell Friday. May the Lord have mercy on Barnwell. The box score and score by innings follow:

Engagements Announced.

On Saturday afternoon Mrs. Geo. F. Hair entertained a number of her friends in honor of Mrs. B. W. Simmons. The occasion was a going-away party on the eve of the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Simmons and family, who will take up their abode in Asheville, N. C.

The entire lower floor was attractively decorated for the event, the prevailing colors being pink and green. Masses of Dorothy Perkins roses were grouped in all available spaces, making a veritable rose bower as a setting for a picture of pleasure. Tables were arranged for progressive rook in library and drawing room. The game was enthusiastically played. A tie was called between Mrs. Eugene Stokes and Mrs. Jesse Carter. The final winner, Mrs. Stokes, presented the prize, a box of crepe de chene handkerchiefs, to Mrs. Simmons, the honoree.

Delicious refreshments were served; a salad course followed by cake and cream, embodying the color scheme of pink and white.

Those invited were: Mesdames W. P. Jones, C. P. Hooton, C. R. Brabham, Henry Brabham, John Cooner, Katherine Riley, C. F. Gilchrist, J. W. Barr, F. B. McCracken, J. A. Wyman, J. A. Williams, Francis Bamberg, W. A. Klauber, C. J. S. Brooker, Henry Zeigler, W. B. Tar-kington, J. F. Carter, W. E. Stokes, G. P. White, F. M. Moye, E. H. Henderson, A. M. Denbow, B. Wyman, E. B. Walker, B. D. Carter, Edward Wannamaker.

Mingled with appreciation of a pleasant evening were many expressions of regret that this popular family will leave this their home town. They have the sincere wishes of all for their future prosperity.—Contributed.
