BASE BALL.

sending the nightmare into extra innings when he called Baxter safe at first on a play in which a blind man at midnight could have seen he was out a city block. Polite English is not emphatic enough to describe the game in full, and therefore some of the plays in detail must be omitted because The Herald is read by too many ladies to publish such stuff.

The official scorer gave Bamberg five errors, but "Doc" Black always has been noted for his big heart.

The game was concluded in the following manner: In the last half of the 13th, with the score still tied, Whitesides, first up, fanned; Radcliff got his fifth hit, a single to right, while Large and Cooner walked filling the bases with one down. Charlie Rentz wanted to play some more, so popped out, but Warren, along with everybody else, was tired of it, so continued his happy habit of hitting in the pinches, and slammed one to right center for three bags if it had been necessary. Denmark had already batted, of course, and so that hit won the so-called game, as Bamberg didn't have another chance to ride the clouds. Score by innings: Bamberg...0022021100001—9 17 5 Denmark...0002000600000—8 13 3 Batteries: Radcliff, Whitesides and Cooner; Bethune, Gibson and Able; umpires, Black and Christie.

LOCALS PLAY ORANGEBURG.

Bamberg 3, Orangeburg 1; Game Called in Third Inning.

Orangeburg is not in the Tri-county league, but a series of two games was arranged between the locals and the team representing the City on the Edisto, and last Wednesday rain not only saved thousands of dollars on the crops in that county, but also a good ball game. For at the beginning of the third inning the downpour came and thus prevented the Orangeburg lads taking a good sound wallop from the Bamberg team. So old Jupiter Pluvius was a friend to Orangeburg in two respects. The locals had on their batting rags and had started sweet revenge on Bill Wolfe for his two defeats administered to them last year.

On the very first ball pitched in the game Otto Large cracked a terrific line drive over the left fielder's head and dashed all the way home for a run when the third baseman errored the throw in. It was a clean three-bagger. The next three batters fanned, Orangeburg rendering due thanks to the speed of Wolfe and the bold and nervy umpiring of one Mr. Webster, who played the best game for the two innings of any man on the Orangeburg club. He certainly must love his home town, but even at that they all realized that they were due for a good licking when the rain interfered. Turnipseed started the second inning with a single over second and came all the way home on "Gyp" Rentz's smashing drive to right center good for three bases even with "Gyp" doing the running. He crossed the plate on Price's single to center. Hitting in the pinches is what spells b-a-s-e b-a-l-l, and the boys surely acquitted themselves beautifully in this inning, if anybody can find anything beautiful about that bunch of ours. Bill Whitesides had Orangeburg swingers swinging lively but in vain, and they should not have reached first. With two down, however, Charlie Rentz dropped Pike Berry's fly for an error and he scored when Cooner errored on the throw in home to catch him. Exactly two full innings were played, and Berry was the only home player to reach first. So the score when play was stopped was 3 to 1, and the rain disappointed the Bamberg folks considerably more than it did the Orangeburg people. Orangeburg will come here for the return game to be played at Rhoad park today.
