South Carolinians who believe in education must deplore any misfortune to one of our institutions of learning and deeply sympathize with Carlisle school in its recent severe losses by fire. Certainly the great heart of Bamberg and her splendid people goes out in all earnestness and sincerity to our own stricken institution, the pride of our little city. Thirty years ago Carlisle began in its infancy preparing the youth of our land to meet the battles of life and to measure up to the requirements of usefulness expected of them by a great and sovereign commonwealth. How well it has done its noble work is reflected in the hundreds of men and women of high type in this state today who received their first real training in this great school. And how it has forged to the front often in the wake of pathetic adversity could be depicted in an interesting moving picture beginning with the first scant buildings and equipment and showing all the way down to its present excellent and modern plant. Carlisle school is the grandest thing, the biggest asset in Bamberg today; it's too big, too fine, too great, too noble to ever lose courage or take a backward step even for a moment; progress and advancement even in an era of misfortune and adversity shall ever and anon be its aim and watchword, and Carlisle is going to grow in spite of every hardship. They say you can't keep a good man down; and neither can you hold down a good cause; and old Carlisle is such a truly great institution that it can't be downed at all even temporarily. The authorities and the faculty are not the type of men who become discouraged, they realize that theirs is a great work and with their lofty aspiration and determination to widen its scope of usefulness and broaden the sphere of patronage and service old Carlisle will emerge from the ashes of her smoldering ruins and with the respect and admiration of the world go and grow on and on into its field of bigger, better, grander achievements until time immemorial, not the old Carlisle above referred to, but a new Carlisle even greater and nobler than the old one.

EHRHARDT BUREAU

W. F. Hiers, Manager.

Miss Merle Farrell Entertains. Ehrhardt, Jan. 17.—On Tuesday Miss Merle Farrell delightfully entertained a few friends with a rook party. Several interesting games were engaged in after which candy, fruit and nuts were served. The guests departed at a late hour, having expressed themselves as having had a most enjoyable afternoon.

Doc Sanders and Ernest Burkhalter, of Fairfax, were recent visitors in town.

Mrs. D. E. Fender is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. P. Padgett, of Walterboro.

Misses Zelma and Bell Breeland visited at Olar last Saturday.

Miss Rosa Hightower spent the week-end with her parents in the Denmark section.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ritter and little daughter, Juanita, have returned to their home at Mileys after a pleasant visit to relatives here.

The recent cold snap has made some folks think that we had real winter weather. Some colds and grippy symptoms have resulted, but we've heard of no flu thus far.

This new year, 1922, dawned with gloomy prospects for our farmers, still they have gone to work with a will and looking forward to a brighter day. Some of our new year's resolutions are already found in a repair shop, but a great many of our farmers have resolved to keep steady "on the job" and we don't believe we'll see the fragments of these resolutions scattered by the wayside.

Winthrop Daughters Chapter.

A most interesting meeting of the Winthrop Daughters chapter was held at the home of Mrs. James T. Burch Friday afternoon. After the routine of business, a delightful programme on Joel Chandler Harris was enjoyed. The programme consisted of a biographical sketch of Harris by Mrs. Eulalie C. Morris, a selection from Uncle Remus by Miss Nell McCants and the gleaner's report by Miss Lillian Martin.

After adjournment the hostess, assisted by Mrs. C. F. Gilchrist and Mrs. S. H. Black, served a salad course with russian tea.

BLACKVILLE BUREAU

Death of Charles H. Rhoden.

Blackville, July 17.—Friends and relatives of Charles H. Rhoden were shocked to learn of his death, which occurred at his home here Jan. 11th. His health had been poor for several months, but he seemed to have improved greatly, and his death was unexpected.

He had been rural mail carrier here for many years, and was universally popular among young and old, who will miss him greatly.

He was 65 years old, and a member of the Double Pond Baptist church, where funeral and interment took place Thursday, Rev. L. H. Miller performing the services.

He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Mary Brooker, three daughters and six sons, who have the deep sympathy of their many friends in their bereavement.

Burns Way to Liberty.

One evening recently two strange colored men were found with a fire in a box car, warming themselves, and to be on the safe side, they were arrested and put in the guard house. That night they used the bedding as "kindling," and burned a hole in the door to escape through, leaving not a spark or foot print behind them.

Enjoying Riddle (?)

Some of the "kiddies" seem to be enjoying this new riddle around here, "Who Makes the Moon-shine?" As no one seems to ever know, they laughingly reply, "We don't know, or we would have him arrested."

Personal Mention.

Friends of Miss Marie Groves will be glad to learn that she is at home again, after successful surgical treatment in a hospital.

Mrs. C. W. Kearse and children, of Allendale, are visiting home folks here.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Toney, of Columbia, spent last week-end with Mrs. Toney's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Altmen.

Miss Annie Hutto visited relatives in Blackville recently.

Friends of Mrs. Mary Rhoden will regret to learn that she contemplates moving to Swansea next month.

Mrs. Chas. F. Black's art class begins this week. All those interested will please see her at once.—adv.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

For the convenience of those living in different sections of the county, the auditor or his deputy will be at the following places on the days and dates mentioned for the purpose of taking returns of real and personal property, and all taxpayers are urged to make a list of everything they are to return. On account of real estate being returned again for 1922, I would suggest that each taxpayer owning land find out just how many acres he has of tenable land, number of acres of wood land, and number of acres of swamp land. That will enable the board of assessors to get at the valuation more accurate, and the land owner will not have to pay as much for inferior land as he pays for lands that he is cultivating. In order that no mistake will be made try and make your own return.
