BOOTLEGGERS CHEMISTS.

Denatured Alcohol is Restored to Beverage Uses.

Bootleggers throughout the country are evolving a new industry—the rectification of denatured alcohol—prohibition officials say, which probably will necessitate a complete revision of the government's system of distribution. Reports have been received, it was said, that some of the government formulae for industrial alcohol lend themselves readily to rectification so that illicit liquor dealers are obtaining the denatured spirits under government permits and by various processes rendering it more or less drinkable. Unusually large quantities of industrial alcohol, officials declared, have been withdrawn in some localities, ostensibly for use in the manufacture of barbers' supplies and toilet preparations, but after being subjected to chemical processes have found their way into channels of the bootleggers' trade. Revision of the present permit system now in vogue is understood to be under consideration with a view to checking any diversion of denatured alcohol into unlawful hands. There have been some suggestions it is understood of shortening the life of existing ninety-day permits for the handling of industrial alcohol and of more rigid regulations governing the establishments to which permits would be issued.

HISTORY AS IT IS PERVERTED

vice president, both arrived by train in the city of Augusta, Georgia, on the evening of May 15, 1865.

Mr. Davis had been captured, as already stated, in Irwin county, Georgia, and Mr. Stephens had been arrested at his residence in Crawfordville. They were placed upon a Savannah river boat in Augusta and brought to Savannah, where they took a river steamer to Hilton Head. Thence they were carried—Mr. Davis to Fortress Monroe, and Mr. Stephens to Fort Warren, in Boston Harbor. The two leaders of the Confederacy were not on the best of terms. They had their differences during the meeting of the Confederate congress in Richmond. Mr. Stephens was a hearty union man and Mr. Davis, as we all know, was an ardent secessionist. Their meeting on the Savannah river was purely formal, and, as Mr. Stephens wrote, "not at all cordial." However, they were companions in captivity and soon revived more interest in one another. Mrs. Davis, herself, was especially kind and attentive. Accompanying these distinguished men when they arrived on the river steam boat in Savannah were Judge John H. Reagan, of Texas, a member of Mr. Davis's cabinet; General Joseph Wheeler, who, by the way, was a native of Augusta, and Senator Clement C. Clay, of Alabama, with his wife.

It was the most memorable voyage ever made in a passenger boat down the Savannah river. Mr. Stephens, in his prison diary, alludes with disgust to the "muddy, sluggish and crooked stream" which bore them on the first leg of their journey to prison.

It is probable that the recent assassination of President Lincoln caused the arrest and imprisonment of these Confederates at that time. Mr. Davis was put in irons in his cell and, added to this torture, probably more humiliating to a brave man, was the story of his attempted escape in the clothes of his wife.—Savannah Press.

Mystery of the Flu.

New York is undergoing an influenza epidemic. Up to Friday 5,097 cases had been reported, with 136 deaths, while there have been 3,011 case of pneumonia, with 1,276 deaths.

There is already a material decrease in the number of cases daily reported. The spread of the epidemic is far less rapid than in previous years. The influenza is of a milder type.

Act. II Rose Garden of the Castle.

ARGUMENT.

ACT I. The Duchess is giving a garden fete in honor of the King and Queen and hopes that the Prince will fall in love with one of her daughters. But the Yellow Witch and Fairy Godmother wish him to marry Cinderella, and determine to foil the plans of the Duchess. The Yellow Witch entices the Duchess and her daughters to her cottage on the Moor, leaving Cinderella and Tom Thumb alone in the castle. Tom Thumb had planned to give a party during the absence of the Duchess, and leaves to invite the guests. While he is away the Prince, who has been wandering about the town, knocks at the kitchen door to ask for a drink of water. He sees Cinderella and falls in love with her. After his departure, Tom Thumb returns, followed by the guests, to the party.

ACT II opens with the Fairy Godmother and her band of fairies dancing on the lawn. They leave before the arrival of the Duchess and her daughters. The Duchess is transported with joy at the success of her plans and is sure one of her daughters will be the Prince's bride, but the Prince is melancholy. He cannot forget Cinderella. Disguised as a strange lady, Cinderella comes to the ball and again meets the Prince who becomes enraptured with her beauty and charm. The clock strikes the hour of twelve, and Cinderella flees leaving one of her slippers behind her. The King offers a reward for news of the beautiful girl and the Fairy Godmother enters and tells who Cinderella really is. Escorted by fairies, Cinderella returns to the ball, and the Prince tries on the slipper and finds it a perfect fit. He claims Cinderella as his bride and the curtain falls as the King calls for a toast "Long live the Prince and his bride, the lovely Cinderella."
