"Sunny Ireland" does not seem to be correctly descriptive any more. Bloody Ireland seems to be more correct. It was thought by many that with the compact duly executed between England and Ireland recently, the Irish question was at least temporarily settled. But not so. Now Ulster is up in arms, and Ulster and Ireland appear to be about as dangerous foes as ever Ireland and England were.

The country is threatened with another huge strike situation. The coal mine operators are demanding shorter working days and less days per week. There seems to be a determined effort among the miners to force their demands, even in spite of the efforts to the contrary of the union leaders. The operators are demanding a working day of six hours, and five days per week. It seems that the time of an honest day's labor has long since passed; the general tendency is less work and more money.

The recent shipment of a number of carloads of hogs from this county has demonstrated the fact that in swine raising there is a fine market for corn and peanuts. Corn grown in this section cannot be shipped profitably. Our climate is not such as to produce good corn for commercial shipment. But hogs can eat the corn, and hogs can be sold profitably. Peanuts can profitably be fed to hogs with more profit than by selling them. Considerable money has been put in circulation in this county recently through the marketing co-operatively of hogs and cattle. This appears to be one certain industry in this section; for, when it comes to hog and cattle raising, there is no section better adapted than Bamberg county.

Cooperative marketing is, to our mind, the salvation of the farmer. There are now movements on foot all over the south to have the farmers to sign up their crops for marketing in this manner, and we do not think any farmer could possibly lose anything by joining the movement. It has been demonstrated time and time again that there is usually a market for all farm produce; the proposition is to get the consumer and producer together at the right time. Just now, when the south is face to face with the boll weevil, is the time to get this movement under way. The south can grow unlimited quantities of profitable produce, but the question is to dispose of the crops after they are made. We can imagine of no other method whereby the farmer can ever hope to have any voice in the price of his goods. For time past remembrance the producer hauls his produce to market and takes what is offered him. He has absolutely no voice in price fixing. This applies to cotton, tobacco, and all other crops. The producer should receive the value of his crops, but one farmer would have a rather difficult job to tell his purchaser his crop is worth so much; ten thousand farmers, however, can say this most effectively. This is the idea of cooperative selling. The world must have the south's cotton crop, but the trouble is the world wants the crop at its own price, without regard for the cost of production. If half of the crop is sold through the marketing organization, it is safe to say there will be a revolution in the price of cotton. The same thing is true of all other products.

OLD COWS MADE YOUNG.
Sow Serum Changes Grandmas to Flappers.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 15.—The principle employed in monkey glands for rejuvenation has been used with success in experiments on cows, it was announced today by officials of the state bureau of animal industry. Eleven dairy cows which had become grandmothers many times were made young and frisky by a serum extracted from glands of sows, the statement said. The old cows were given the serum in capsules, and not only did they fail to develop any traits of pigs, but were reported by observers to have become useful again.

Complete reports on the experiment have been sent to Secretary of Agriculture Rasmussen from the department's laboratory at Philadelphia.

Heroes of Diamond Are Not so Well Known.

Supposedly national heroes of the diamond, the gridiron and the silver sheet do not stand so high as might be supposed with the high school and college students. This was learned when the Institute for Public Service of New York made public some results of a national current history test taken by more than 200,000 pupils.

Twenty thousand of the students averaged only forty-six per cent. on ten questions about baseball, football and the movies. Of 500 seniors, more of them knew about de Valera, Lloyd George, Briand and General Leonard Wood than about which team won the world's series or what shining light of the screen is starred in a current popular picture. A majority of 500 girls knew more about Sinn Fein than about Mlle. Legulen and Ruth Law.

Some of them thought Mlle. Lenglen was a French chemist and some others identified her as Japan's representative of the armament conference.

As for Christy Matthewson, his picture elicited the answer that he was the man who sold out the world series in 1920. Thirty-five per cent. of the boys did not know who won the last world's series; 50 per cent. did not know Babe Ruth's home run record and seventy per cent. of the girls did not know the name of the only woman member of congress. Three hundred high school seniors could not identify Pershing, and four out of the same hundred did not recognize a picture of President Harding.

Father's Change.

Willie (to his father who had recently married the second time)—"There's a shop in the High Street just like you, daddie."

Father—"Shop like me? What do you mean?"

Willie (getting near to the door)—"Why, it's under entirely new management."—Edinburg Scotsman.

A New Game.

The Augusta Chronicle announces today a most interesting and amusing game. The object of this game is to see who can secure the largest and nearest correct list of words beginning with the letter "P," covering names of visible objects contained in a picture, copy of which will be found elsewhere in this issue of our publication.

This class of game has proven to be a very interesting pastime and many valuable prizes have been won by persons throughout the country. There is no reason at all why some of these prizes cannot be won by our readers and it would be well to get started on your list of words tonight and you will find this puzzle game will be the means of supplying you with many pleasurable moments.—adv.
