

1814 STAR SPANGLED BANNER 1922

(Francis Scott Key.)

(If you are a good American, no matter whether you were born in Manchester, Hamburg, Palermo, Dublin, Stockholm, Kischneff, Vera Cruz or Keokuk, why not celebrate the anniversary of the Star Spangled Banner by learning it word for word, so that you will never forget your own national anthem.)

O say can you see by the dawn's early light
What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose broad stripes and bright stars thro' the perilous fight
O'er the ramparts we watch'd, were so gallantly streaming?
And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof thro' the night that our flag was still there,
O say does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?
O thus be it ever where freemen shall stand
Between their lov'd home and the war's desolation!
Blest with vict'ry and peace may the heav'n rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserv'd us a nation!
Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto—"In God is Our Trust,"
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

FLIERS FLY BACKWARD.

Australian Air Current Prevents Gliding Down.

From Australia comes the report of a remarkable air phenomenon, which has been confirmed by investigation and simply explained by meteorologists. The facts and their explanation are briefly as follows:

Airplane pilots while flying over the New South Wales coast, facing the vastness of the South Pacific, have reported the amazing experience that when the time came for them to descend near the earth, preparatory to alighting, they found that, instead of sliding down, their machine showed an obstinate and extraordinary tendency to keep on rising upward. One airman, in fact, piloting a medium powered "taxi-plane" type of machine, put the bow of his craft earthward in order to make a graceful glide down, and when he looked at his altimeter a moment later to see how far he had descended he saw with amazement that the dial registered him as actually going up in the air backwards!

He dipped the bow of his machine still deeper, only to find that he was still going up instead of down. It was not, indeed, till he switched his engine on and flew hard for the ground that he overcame the mysterious force at work and began to reduce his altitude.

And now for the explanation of this astonishing affair. Along the coast of New South Wales there is a long mountain chain. Great upper wind trends, raising in from thousands of miles seaward, impinge upon these mountains, and being deflected, sent vast eddies upward almost to unknown heights. And it is in these huge invisible and abnormal currents have been caught to their own vertically upwards, that air pilots blowing not horizontally but almost tense bewilderment.

The waters in the river Jordan in Palestine are to be developed into power to turn the wheels of new industry. The British government has granted a concession for the utilization of the river for 70 years. The energy obtained will be used for house and street lighting, pumping, water supply, railways and many other purposes.

SUMMIT OF PIKE'S PEAK.

Highest American Point Reached by Automobile Highway.

What is the highest point in America that an automobile may travel? More than 75,000 motorists answered the question this year. There are many highways of dizzy altitude traversing the White Mountains of New Hampshire, the Appalachian range of the Middle Atlantic states, the Blue Ridge mountains, and the Canadian Rockies, but the "roadway stop" is in the Pacific Coastal Range.

Winding its serpentine way for eighteen miles up the mountainside is the Pike's Peak Automobile Highway; not only the loftiest roadway in America, but representing one of the greatest engineering feats of the age. To build an automobile highway more than twenty feet wide at its narrowest point, smooth as a paved boulevard and graded to the safety of a railway right of way, is a marvel of engineering construction. And that is what government engineers did when they constructed the Pike Peak Automobile Highway, built at a cost of $400,000, subscribed by public spirited citizens of Colorado Springs. Spencer Penrose, who conceived the plan in 1914, and who headed the movement saw the completed result of his efforts two years later.

Opened in July 1916, in the face of criticism from engineers, who declared, in all sincerity, that it could not be done and characterized the entire plan as impractical, the highway became famous almost overnight. Today it is probably better known to western automobilists than any other Rocky Mountain scenic route. For thousands of people each year who make the trip leave impressed at the variety of scenery and the natural beauty revealed by never-ending panoramas, too eloquent for portrayal by the artist's brush.

From Colorado Springs the highway leads up the famous Ute Pass, where hundreds of years ago a constant beat of Indian moccasins wore a trail along the sheer red walls of the canon, in their journeys from the western slope to the magic springs of the Manitou.

On and upward the highway winds, past Cascade and Divide, with the mountain streams and protected glens where spruce forests flourish. After you have passed Glen Cove and swept into the heights above the timberline, the eye switches away from the things at hand and your vision soars off into lofty spaces that seem to fade into nothingness.

Running from the sunlit climate of Colorado Springs to the snow covered mountain crest is like a change from the tropics to the Arctic regions. It is no uncommon experience for visitors on the Peak to stand in sunshine, far above the clouds and watch a rainstorm playing on the canyons and country below. This is a phenomenon of nature seen elsewhere, but without

CAT RAISES FOXES.

Maine Rancher Makes a Unique Experiment.

Fox pups have been reared by mother dogs, it is said, but it has remained for a Maine silver fox ranchman, Frank A. Harvey, to bring up a litter of fox pups with a cat foster-mother.

Pussy still wanders interestedly about the big fox pens where her last season's pups have grown to her own size, and would still fondle them if she could. But Mr. Harvey believes that they would make a meal of her to-day if they could reach her.

"I wanted to see how far I could go in semi-domesticating these foxes, he said. "Every one knows how wary the fox is. Frightened by dogs, or guns, or strangers, and unable to bury or hide the newly born pups, the mother may kill them by just carrying them around in her fear. So I have been trying to overcome the fox's fear of men and animals.

"I felt that if I could raise a litter of the fox pups on a mother cat they would become accustomed to our handling them, fondling them, talking to them, accustomed to strangers and the barking of dogs, and learn their protection from all harm while in our care.

"We had our difficulties. We had to give over the whole lower floor of our home to the experiment, but it was worth while for once, although I am afraid the trouble would deter us again.

"The pups responded to the treatment and show confidence and playfulness with me and no fear of visitors, passing dogs, or the occasional hunter and his gun in the woods near by."

The graceful lines of the kimono have prevailed almost unchanged throughout the history of Japanese dress.

the vivid aspect of storms seen from Pike's Peak.

Nor is it unusual for those who journey to the summit in midsummer to engage in a snowball battle royal, while the sun shines brightly overhead and the plains below are wrapped in the warmth of a midsummer day.

While in its completed state Pike's Peak Highway represents a large outlay of capital, it is in no sense a money-making proposition. Whatever interests the citizens of Colorado Springs have manifested in its construction had its inspiration purely through the nation-wide campaign for better roads. The small fee now charged motorists making the trip is applied toward liquidation of its actual cost. By 1940, it is expected that the highway, now under supervision of the state of Colorado, will have paid for itself, and be thrown open to the public, free in every respect.

Shall South Carolinians Betray the Faith of their Fathers?

FOR generations Democracy has been the faith of South Carolina. Born in days that tested the hearts of men baptized in the fires of war, and purified through shameful years of suffering under the heel of Republican negro rule, it is a faith that every true son and daughter of our soil should be as jealous of as honor itself. It is our birthright, breathed into us in the wombs of our mothers and mingled with the milk that fed our infancy. It was the birthright of Hampton, Butler, Gary, Tillman and the hosts of lesser men who supported them in their struggles. Shall this generation sell it for a mess of pottage?

Cole L. Blease is again a candidate for the office of governor of the State. It is the highest honor in our gift; it is an honor that should not be given lightly. The governor of a State is as a light set on a high hill, on whom all men look, seeing in him the spirit of the people who put him there.

This spirit is necessary to our very being as a self-governing white race. To uphold and keep it pure is a trust that we hold for the honor and the safety of our women. Can we bear that it should be betrayed? Can we submit that any man who seeks our offices should have stained or trifled with this faith that carries our very political freedom at its core?

Has Cole L. Blease kept this faith of pure Democracy without which no man is held worthy of our public offices? Or has he stained it by dealings with our political enemies who would weaken the firmness of the white man's government of this State?

Do we not recall his Allen University negro speech, in which he told the assembled audience of negro men and women to demand their rights, which he explained in detail to them? Do not all men remember his bitter abuse of Mr. Wilson during 1917 and 1918? Did he not attempt to run for Congress, in 1919, as an Independent—an individual denounced by Wade Hampton as worse than a Republican? He said: "Let my friends stay out of the primary."

There are few Democrats in South Carolina who do not know of Joseph W. Tolbert. He is the "boss" the overlord of Republican patronage, on whom the hands of Warren G. Harding have been laid in approval and blessing. He is the giver of all power, the ruler of "The Black and Tan." Is it thinkable that a Democrat who has at heart the good of his party and people would have any relations with this man in politics?

Cole L. Blease wrote Tolbert, on May 21, 1921, a letter of approval of Tolbert's leadership of the Republican party in South Carolina; a letter strongly commending Tolbert's years of service and devotion to his party; a letter intended to strengthen Tolbert's position as Republican leader, which then seemed to be in danger. There was nothing secret, nothing private about the letter. Following his indorsement of Tolbert, Cole L. Blease wrote:

"You are at liberty to read this letter to whom you please, or publish it if you wish, as I presume everybody knows that I speak what I think, regardless of consequences. I have written you freely as you requested me to do. I am a Democrat; not a Wilson so-called Democrat, but a Jeffersonian Democrat, who rejoiced at Harding's election and the downfall of idealism." Why this interest of Cole L. Blease in Joe Tolbert? Can you point to any other Democrat showing the same interest?

No word of that letter has ever been denied by Cole L. Blease. He cannot deny it; he meant it. "I presume everybody knows that I speak what I think." What do the Scriptures say? "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Was the thinking of Cole L. Blease when he wrote that letter the thinking of a sound and true Democrat? It stands in cold type, the most complete indictment ever written of the Democracy of Cole L. Blease—and he wrote it himself!

Are the white people of South Carolina, the political heirs of Hampton and Tillman, prepared to entrust their government to a man who is the confessed approver, adviser and comforter of Joe Tolbert, the political heir of the Scalawags and Carpet-baggers?

Shall a man sit in the Governor's seat who dares not to answer the direct, simple question whether or not he voted in 1920 for the nominees of the Democratic party?

Shall we lift to our highest office a man who found it in his heart to rejoice with Joe Tolbert, leader and political comrade of the "Black and Tan" politicians of the State, over the election of Warren G. Harding and the downfall of Democracy?

The Governor of South Carolina is presumed to be the leader of the State's Democratic forces. Do the people of South Carolina want to set up a Democracy that is corrupted at its source?

These are questions that every loyal Democrat whose love is for his State should answer honestly at the bar of his conscience before he votes in the coming primary.

Proof is held of every statement herein made.
