Fads and Frills Have No Place Here

Chicago, Jan. 13.—A significant feature of a recent comprehensive study of the American college curriculum is that the "fads and frills" which have been planted in the soil of the American college have never won their way into a permanent place in the American college program, Dr. R. L. Kelly, executive secretary told the association of American colleges here today.

"The college has frequently been charged with having no program in psychology and with wandering rather aimlessly through the field of human knowledge," he said.

"In practically every college in the country the outstanding subject is English language and literature. The only one of the old line 'disciplinary' subjects which still plays a prominent part in the college program is mathematics. Two subjects have come to prominence undoubtedly as a result of the war, namely the French language and literature and chemistry. With the above subjects is usually coupled history or some related subject, as political economy, sociology and politics.

"It is these subjects which the students in the American colleges are studying for the most part and this statement applies to women's colleges as well as men's and co-educational institutions. Even in the women's colleges the new subject, domestic science, has not in general attained a prominent place. In a word, it may be said that the American colleges have a very definite program and that program is being carried out with marvelous uniformity throughout the entire country."

Friends Still Believe In Power of Silence

Richmond, Ind., Jan. 13. On the background of an experience of more than 250 years, during which the Quaker church has relied upon "silent waiting before God" as the source of spiritual discernment, its members, known as the Friends, today still believe in the power of silence. Walter T. Woodward, general secretary of the Five Years Meeting of Friends in America and editor of the American Friend, in a statement issued here today said this religious group still believes that the world may be purified and strengthened through the power of a living silence.

"From the constant clash and confusion which distracts it," he said, "the world must retire to the inner chamber of the unseen reality of the spirit. If peace and good will are to become regnant.

"The world is now stirred as never before with aspirations for world brotherhood. To become fruitful, these aspirations must be based upon the will to attain the attainment of this will. It must come through spiritual communion with God, and through His will with man, the brother. Herein lies the power of silence, through which we may become in tune with the infinite.

"This is not the silence of seclusion which would lead one from life's responsibilities to the introspection of the monastic cell. It is what Friends term a living silence through which men may become spiritually energized for the great tasks of human betterment.

"Spiritual things cannot be discerned without quiet meditation," the western world is reminded by Sadhu Sundar Singh, the Hindoo seer. That American churches are coming to recognize this fundamental principle is illustrated by the clarion call for "silence" made by The Churchman, organ of the Episcopal church of America. At a time when the soul of America is being stirred to meet the need of the world, Friends wish it for all friends of peace and good will."

Trained Through Visual System

Chicago, Jan. 21.—Disabled war soldiers, taking courses of education from the government can learn certain trades and industrial work through the visual educational system recently instituted by the government. One fifth of the time they would spend through lectures and the study system, according to results of experiments made here by the Society of Visual Education.

"There are various reasons for this condition," said Sumter Calvert, superintendent of the society here. "The chief factor in making this rapid education possible is the fact that through the pictures the pupil is enabled to gain what might be called practical experience as well as theory for the subject under study is gone through with in far more elaborate detail than books supply and the student can see and record it on the spot."

Of course, the visual system is not a substitute for the ordinary features of a course that puts the finish on the education of the pupil, but he usually gets what he is reading about and can avoid concentrated effort, if he has taken the visual system first."

The government has made educational films dealing with mechanical arts, the machine shop, dairy and light farm work, civics and what taxes are for in relation to the city and government, bee culture, health and hygiene and geography and history.

The government however, is particularly. In case a film is being made with the subject of dairying, a dairy with the very latest equipment is picked out. The picture machine and operator is transported to this dairy but accompanying him is a professor from a leading university, who is considered to have knowledge that is the very last word on the subject of cows, milk, butterfats and dairying in general. Also a practical dairymen who stands at the top of his profession is in the party. Then there is the general film manager. These three decide upon the manner in which the picture is to be made to bring forth the best results from the student's viewpoint. Every detail of dairying is shown with close ups on all features that require close study when in text books. Time exposure is considered for in each showing of the films, a professor and practical dairymen instruct the pupils in the finer details. Health and hygiene are included in all pictures.

The same system of taking pictures is applied in every film. In the machine shop pictures, for example, an expert machinist and a professor in mechanical engineering both oversee the picture filmed and watch not only for details that the student needs but for the details that the students should be cautioned to avoid.
