FOUND THE KEYNOTE.

The Story of an Angry Fiddler and a Dancin' Bridge.

The old Sixth street bridge was a suspension bridge, and in connection therewith a story used to be told. Everybody knows that soldiers in crossing a suspension bridge, must break step and bands are not allowed to play marches because of the cumulative force of the vibrations, which are apt to either destroy the bridge completely or crystallize the iron cables. Now, sound is vibration, and this explanation, not very scientifically put here, is the basis of the story, remembering that every object is supposed to have a keynote, which when struck on a musical instrument evokes responsive vibrations in the said object.

The story goes that many years ago an old man carrying a fiddle in a case once started across the bridge without paying toll. He was called back by the tollkeeper, protested his inability to pay, but was not allowed to cross. Threatening vengeance, the old fiddler seated himself on the wharf under the Allegheny end of the bridge and began to scrape away on his fiddle for hours, apparently trying all sorts of notes, half notes and combinations of notes and chords. Suddenly he seemed to find what he sought for, for his face lighted up, and he began to scrape steadily on a certain chord. A man went through the bridge. Faster played the old man, and the wire cables fairly sang in response to the wild notes of the fiddle. Furiously the old fiddler scraped away, and the cables began to vibrate, slowly at first, the vibrations growing stronger and stronger as the keynote sounded on the violin. The bridge began to tremble, then to sway.

By this time the tollkeepers saw something was up, for the pedestrians on the bridge began to run, drivers whipped up their horses and men and women with blanched faces declined to set foot on either end of the structure. A messenger (there were no telephones then) was dispatched for the superintendent, and he came running. The old fiddler was pointed out, and a constable was ordered to arrest him; but, there being no suspicious person law then in existence, the officer shook his head. The bridge was cutting up all sorts of capers, swaying back and forth like a swing, until at last the superintendent in desperation ran to the fiddler and promised never to demand toll from him. An agreement was entered into, the fiddler pledging to keep secret to his dying day the keynote, so that no revengeful musician ever again could place the structure in jeopardy without studying out the keynote himself.—Pittsburg Gazette.

FARM AND GARDEN

PUMPKINS IN QUANTITY.

The New Industry of Growing Them For Canning Factories.

In northeastern Ohio large quantities of pumpkins are raised for canning purposes. This is especially true in the vicinity of Canneaut, where is located one of the largest canneries for pumpkins on the American continent. More than 2,000 tons of this product are often used at a cannery in one season, and this quantity is equivalent to about 1,335 wagon loads, says a writer in Ohio Farmer.

A field that will yield twenty tons of pumpkins to the acre is considered excellent. The pumpkin field shown in the cut was an unusually productive one. Pumpkins only were raised instead of corn and pumpkins together.

PART OF A PROLIFIC PATCH.

Most farmers raise pumpkins in the midst of their corn and cannot, of course, expect so large a pumpkin crop. The size of the annual crop also depends a great deal upon the weather at the time when the vines are in blossom. The yield may therefore vary from year to year, and on this naturally depends the price which is paid per ton, it ranging in different years from $2.50 to $5. And when the crop in the vicinity of a canning factory is small it is necessary to ship pumpkins in from other parts of the country in carloads.

Pumpkins are being grown in much greater quantities today than they were a few years ago. States like West Virginia and Arkansas, where the agriculturist has given little attention to them in the past, are finding that under certain conditions they are a profitable crop. Michigan, where so much attention is being given to fruits, sugar beets and other products in recent years, is giving increased attention to this crop too. A ton of pumpkins will make about 1,200 pounds when canned.

An Easily Made Sawhorse.

In the cut from Orange, a Odd Farmer are shown an easily made sawhorse and a convenient way of holding wood. Use pieces of 2 by 3 or 2 by 4 inch stuff for the legs, cutting them the proper length. Mortise the legs together and connect the ends with wooden braces made of 1 by 1 1/2 inch stuff at the top and bottom on each side, as shown. Run a light iron rod from one end piece to the other at the center.

To hold the timber in place when sawing secure a hickory pole about two inches in diameter and six feet long. Fasten one end to the ground at one side of the horse by means of a stake or a bent wooden staple, as illustrated. Bend the pole over the timber to be held and fasten with a forked stake set in the ground. A small post with holes bored in one side a few inches apart and a pin to fasten in the holes will be found preferable to a forked stick, as the pole can thus be sprung down and held at different points to suit the various kinds of wood laid on the sawhorse.

"Cotton Cultures" Condemned.

When the warning against nitro-culture was given our readers it was not based upon the worthlessness of the cotton cultures. We supposed the bits of cotton contained living bacteria, and the thought was only that thousands were paying $2 a package for bacteria when they either had the bacteria in their soils or else had soils in which these bacteria would not live. The advertising by the national department and the dealers in commercial nitro-culture was misleading and caused unprofitable investment. But now we know more about the cotton cultures. The great majority of those tested by scientists are absolutely worthless. They are lifeless, and Professor Harding of the New York state station, after a summer's work in which several other well known bacteriologists assisted, says that cotton cultures are a failure. To this end does the much exploited discovery of the national de-
