ON RURAL LIFE. The breeze of night is mink to rest, Upon the river's tranquil breast, And every bird has sought her nest, Where silent is her minstreley;

Where allent is her ministretor,
The quaen of heavends miling high,
A pale bark in the azong sky.
And not a breath is heard to sigh,
So deep the soft tranquility.

We were not a little entertained a fer days ago, on opening a package direct from New-York, to find one of its finer componeats enveloped in a manuscript letter to an continent mercantile house in Liverpool, England, of which the following is a copy. However, we have no difficulty in conjecturing how it came there; as it is the practice

If things he is strong enough, he will break from his ligence, the unsafe condition of one or two houses, and that a few weeks would bring to light what might be the prospect of holding out against their then increasing pressure. We have now to say, affairs with them are hopeless, and, with them several other fail-

The old house of Gales & Seaton, has given way. Peter Force & Co. are strongly suspected; but you know there never was much confidence in this firm. Besides its want of skill and principle, its business was ures must occur. want of skill and principle, its business was left to too many hands. Its capital was too scattered and shifting, and its managers were too loose and concetted. But these are not the worst appearances: that fine, and what was considered solid and extensive copartnership between Adams, Clay, Webster, & Co. is much shaken, and a great many go so the far as to believe that it is winding up its business: some, indeed, are ill-natured emough to foretell, and offer a wager, that they will actually stop fayment in March, 1829. Of this opinion, we regret to say, we are among the number, and you know we have some right to judge, having a large concern in their under business. If its other branches got along no better than ours, they are sure to full, and of one thing we know we we shall have experienced the fate of poor Gales & Section.

fleers. Cropher, Benson, U. Co.

General Cropher, Benson, U. ters are those that turn king's evidence at the old bailey; and on such testimony, a cutthroat would not be convicted, unsupported by other evidence. Now Gales & Seaton, though we were free from the same as any can, no better backed than we are, from imposing appearances. If things go to pieces, you know me lose nothing. Ours has never been any thing but a false capital, either in credit or character; and whatever confidence we sustained, it was never without its just and due proportion of suspicion. If you recollect, we hinted, in former intelligence, the unsafe condition of one or two ligence, the unsafe condition of one or two houses, and that a few weeks would bring to houses, and that a few weeks would bring to houses, and that a few weeks would bring to houses, and that a few weeks would bring to houses, and that a few weeks would bring to house, and that a few weeks would bring to house, and that a few weeks would bring to house, and that a few weeks would bring to house, and that a few weeks would bring to house, and that a few weeks would bring to house, and that a few weeks would bring to house, and that a few weeks would bring to house, and that a few weeks would bring to house, and that a few weeks would bring to house a run upon Adams, Clay, Webster, & Co., push them to bankruptcy, out the next up for homself upon their ruins. It is further said, that this plan will receive the unqualified aid of the southern merchant. from the outstanding arrears due the old house of Virginia, Carolina, & Co. a firm lately conducted by William H. Crawford & Co. who, notwithstanding he retired from Co. who, notwithstanding he retired from business for a short time, is out again, 'tis said, making preparations to honour any drafts that may be drawn on him to cripple the monopolizing operations of the coalition, as the Adams house is called. This, Webster and the same form of the own form, force-
