Hamburg, September, 28th, 1829.

P. S. I am proud to say that the Hamburgia merchants have supplied themselves this season, with more goods of all kinds, than at any former period, particularly such as Salt, Iron, Sugar, Coffee, Regult, Dry Goods, &c. Several new stores have already opened, and others will open very shortly. The usual applied dispublics prevails to give as heretolors, at bast, we much, if not more for COTTON, than in abd other city or town in the ep-consisty.

As for money, none will be countenanced unless it is founded on a solid basis; and should any other be taken in the market, or should any monted institution in which the market and country are interested, go beyond what might be considered just and prudent, immediate noitee of it will be given, without fear or favor.

Under all these favorable circumstances I am induced to hope that the community and compry reperally, will find it to their interest to favor us with their custom.
