FIRE IN BATESBURG.

On Thursday night at about 2 o'clock a fire broke out in the ware rooms of the Batesburg Ginney. The manager Mr. J. W. Stribling was awakened from his sleep by a burning rafter falling near his bedside. He was the only occupant of the building. Before he had time to even gather up his clothes a number of pistol cartridges which he had in his room commenced to go off. His exit by way of the door was entirely cut off and seeing this he made his way to a side door, which he had to force by main strength not having anything to break it open with. The building being a frame structure burned very quickly and the flames soon consumed all the contents which consisted of about $1500. worth of cotton seed, cotton seed hulls and cotton seed meal. A freight car was standing on the side track beside the building about half loaded with seed, this was also burnt. Mr. Stribling lost everything he had including wearing apparel. He had to walk a distance of a quarter of a mile to the Cullum Hotel in his undershirt and a pair of old overalls, barefooted. The building was insured but the contents were not.

OFFERS BIBLE FOR TOBACCO.

A Chicago grocery man tells of a seedy looking individual, with the appearance of better days in his memory who came into the grocery, and in the accent of the old South, asked for a package of smoking tobacco. This was refused.—The old man, who wore an ancient silk hat and a long frock coat, turned about with a sigh, but returned shortly with a pained look and a copy of the bible.

"My name is Rush, sub—" "You look it," the grocer interjected. "I am a brother, sub, of Gen. Rust, of Miss'ippi, sub, and not in the habit of making propositions of this kind, sub. But if you will take this book, sub, as a pledge, and trust me for the smoking material, sub, I pledge you the homah of a Rust, sub, that I will redeem it in a very few days."

And yet the grocer refused to part with the innoxious weed?

Again the old man turned away and with a sigh remarked: "Well, sub, if you won't take my word nor the word of God, either, I presume that it is best to close these negotiations. Good day, sub; good day."

"That was too much for even an hard hearted a man as I am," said the grocer. "I called the old gentleman back and made him happy with a package of the best tobacco, and I didn't keep his Bible either."—Exchange.

Nervous Dyspepsia Cured by Rydale's Stomach Tablets.

Mr. R. E. Jones, buyer for Parker & Bridget, whose large department stores are located at 9th and Penn. Ave. Washington, D. C., writes, under date of April 14, '04, as follows: Last February, one year, while in New York on business for my house, I caught a severe cold, which laid me up for several weeks and left me weak and nervous. I had little or no appetite, and my digestion was very poor. My physicians could not get at the cause of my trouble, as my digestion seemed so much impaired. I decided to try Rydale's Stomach Tablets, being assured by a friend, they were a good dyspepsia medicine. After using them for a few days, I began to realize that I was getting better. I gave up the doctor's prescription and have gained 20 pounds while using two boxes of these tablets. I never felt better in my life, and accord credit Rydale's Stomach Tablets with having cured me. I can recommend them most heartily, to sufferers from nervous indigestion and general run-down conditions of the system. J. D. Timmons.

THE TRUTHFUL FISHERMAN.

The late Senator Quay, himself a great fisherman, used to enjoy telling of the tall stories recounted by the West Virginia anglers along the banks of Cheat river.

One day a stranger from Maryland, in search of sport, asked one of the natives whether there was any good fishing in the vicinity.

"None better anywhere," was the reply of the man.

"What kind of fish have you hereabouts?" asked the stranger.

"Oh, most all kinds."

"I hope there are some game fish to be had," continued the man from Maryland. "Tell me," said he, "what was the weight of the largest fish you ever caught in this region?"

"Well, sir," responded the West Virginian, "we don't never take no weigh-in machines with us when we fish, so I wouldn't like to say, being an honest man, just how much that last treat of mine did weigh. But, stranger, I don't mind telling you that when I pulled that fish out of the water the river went down a foot."—Maryland Journal.

QUICKSANDS.

Quicksands—That is moving or living sand—is ordinary sand so saturated with water that it will not bear any considerable weight. Sand that is dry or not very wet becomes on being pressed closely compact and less yielding but where there is sufficient water mixed with it to keep the grains apart it does not cohere and yields to any weight.

Quicksands, then, are sands from which the water is not drained away, either because a constant current passes through them or because there is a dense substratum of clay or rock. They are commonly found near the mouths of large rivers or where there are springs or on flat beaches.

Probably those who fall into quicksands would not be engulfed if they kept quite quiet. As soon as the sand reached their chin they would be supported rather more than if they were in ordinary water, owing to the greater density of the mixture of sand and water which constitutes a quicksand. GOING TO A FIRE IN CHINA.

"I was in Perkin," said an American tourist, "when a fire broke out a few doors below the house in which I was lodging, and at the first alarm I rushed out and into the burning structure to see what could be saved. I was at once arrested, and later on discovered the Chinese way of fighting a fire. A policeman first required an affidavit of the head of the household to the effect that he did not deliberately set the blaze, and for this purpose took him before an official half a mile away. A second was stationed to see that no one removed any furniture until the papers had been made out.

"After a lapse of forty minutes the firemen arrived. They looked at the burning house and decided that it was on fire. After much argument it was further agreed that it would be a waste of water to try to put out the flames. Two members, who erected a ladder and climbed part of the way up, were duly reproved for too much zeal, and after the name, age, and habits of the owner had been taken the fire department retired in good order.

"As the flames were unhampered the house burned to the ground, and when the owner returned he was beaten by his neighbors for endangering their property. I was held in durance vile for two hours and then fined 40 cents."—Chicago News.
