Soldier Balks Death Plot.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a civil war veteran, of Kemp, Tex., that a plot existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to cause his death. "I contracted a stubborn cold "he writes, "that developed a cough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies; for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery. I now weigh 178 pounds." For severe Colds, obstinate Coughs, Hemorrhages Asthma, and to prevent Pneumonia it's unravaled. 50c. and $1.00. HIS FIRST LOVE CASE.

Myron Woodworth was an attorney just passing middle age. He was known as the lawyer who had never lost a case. Whether this was because he would not take a case that he was not sure of or was so resourceful that his opponents could never defeat him does not appear. The fact remains that until the Yardley case was tried no judge or jury had ever brought a final decision or verdict against him. Upon that case hangs a tale.

Mrs. Yardley died, leaving some $10,000 to a sister, Mrs. Hunt, who had nursed her in her last illness, cutting off her own daughter, Julia Scott, a young married woman living in a different place. Mrs. Scott undertook to break the will on the ground that her aunt had influenced her mother while under the effect of opiates to leave her proferty to the aunt. No one doubted up to the last moment that Woodworth would win, for he has established every point needed to estab-

The defendant's counsel called for Margaret Hunt, and the name was repeated by the clerk with no more reverence than he would have spoken the name of a habitual criminal There was a rustle of woman's dress and a young girl-she was the daughter of the defendant-passed to the witness stand. Her very appearance begot an unconscious deference in every man in the courtroom.

Woodworth at the moment of her entrance was chatting with a fellow attorney. When he turned his eyes to the witness they rested upon a vision of loveliness. Not only he, but judge, jury-indeed, every one in the court-fell under the spell of her presence. In a voice low and sweet she responded to the questions put to her by the defendant's counsel, who elicited from her testimony which if not shaken might yet turn the case against the plaintiff. But those who know Woodworth did not fear, it was upon cross-examination that he was especially strong. Indeed, as he listened to her evidence he saw a weak point that destroyed its value. She had repeated a conversation she had heard between her mother and the testator in which the former urged the latter to leave her property to her daughter, Julia Scott. But the witness had said that she was not in the room and did not see those who were talking.

When Woodworth took the witness or cross-examination and stood framing his first question a slight tremor passed over the girl, and she cast a quick glance at the judge as if to be- a pleased smile stole over her lips. seech protection. Then she furned her eyes back on the lawyer, bit her lip as if to gain courage and submitted herself to be tormented. She did not doubt for a moment that Woodworth would prove her a perjurer.

"Miss Hunt," he said, "how far was he room in which you were when you overheard the conversation you have mentioned from the room in which he conversation occurred?" A trouble look passed over the face of the witness, and she did not anwr the question.

The husband of the testator had been a physician, and his house-the house in which the conversation occurred-was fitted with a speaking tube between the front door and the lector's bedroom. His window occunied the bedroom to which the tube led. Miss Hunt, standing at the front loor directly before the lower tube nouth awaiting admittance, had heard the conversation through the tube. Woodworth knew this and was prepared to make the statement appear improbably. He might force her to admit that she was not in the house at all, then deny her a chance to tell how she had overheard the onversation.

He stood looking at the girl, who looked at him with all the gentle reproachfulness of a fawn regarding a hunter about to plung a knife into its throat. Then her eyes filled.

Woodworth's case was lost. All he had to do to win it was to draw out the girl's testimony so as to make it appear to the jury a weak invention. He knew in fact, as well as by her guiltless bearing that she spoke the it on me." truth. At the moment of triumph he gave up victory gave up his client's case which he was in duty bound to win.

"Let me see," he said, looking a bit of paper, "Perhaps I can get at it in another way."

The other way did not lead to the enough to trust you implicitlyspeaking tube or to anything that would compromise the witness. Af- time? ter asking a number of irrelevant ther examination.

hoped to gain. Every man has are ideal for his wife. It is seldon that the ideal is realized, but when Woodworth saw Margaret Hunt in the witness stand he recognize something more than he had ever pictured in his imagination. He sought her out and eventually married her. He says that if he lost the case in which she was a witness and $10,000 he won a blessing that no success could equal. Besides he has made up the pecuniary loss many times over .-- Evelyn D. Witworth.
