Sunflower Philosophy.
It is said that no one on earth can save money as fast as an old maid after she has become convinced that men are not worth having.
Admiration for the style of hats the women bought for Easter will have to be acquired, like a taste for olives.
When one says, "This is the most terrible town in the world for gossip," put it down that that person has been up to something to excite gossip.
People in big towns are so selfish. We would rather live in a little town where the people sympathize with you when in trouble, and where, if you have no trouble, they will look up some for you.
We wouldn't like to be an express agent; we never go by an express. See that we do not hear a pup cry. Pups are common enough at home, everywhere. Why are they shipped over the country?
When a man is left with a lot of motherless children on his hands, he usually scatters them among his relatives. If it is the woman who is left with fatherless little ones she keeps them together and earns a living besides. Women develop great energy when left without a man. In fact, all the widows we know are getting along a great deal better than the married women.—Aitchison (Kan.) Globe.

The Spiritual Line.
A good story is told of a very sedate doctor of divinity. When returning by rail from a church congress, a fellow passenger undertook to draw him into conversation, and so far succeeded that the reverend gentleman asked him to that profession he happened to be engaged.
"Oh," said the layman, cheerfully, "I'm in the cotton line."
"Oh, indeed!" replied the clergyman, urbanely, "there is a good deal of business going on in that branch just now, I understand."
"First-class," said the layman, with a cunning smile. "And may I ask what is your line?"
"I," said the clergyman, patronizingly, with the nearest approach to a joke he was ever known to perpetrate, "I am in the spiritual line."
"Blest if I didn't think so!" exclaimed his companion, knowingly, and, putting one hand on the doctor's knee, he leaned forward eagerly, and added, with an indescribable wink, "but, I say, what a price you have put on it!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

SQUIRRELS AS PLAGUE CARRIERS
The discovery in California that ground squirrels may become infected with bubonic plague is so disquieting as to be matter of national concern, according to an editorial writer in American Medicine (New York) June. Says this paper:
"It is generally believed that the bacillus pestis is a normal inhabitant of some Asiatic rodent—perhaps the rat—but, from the excessive mortality among rats, it is not likely that they are the ones with the tolerant immunity which keeps the bacillus in existence, for it is a pure parasite in nature unable to exist out of the body of some other animal. So it is not at all unlikely that the ground squirrels of California now known to be infected have sufficient tolerance to keep the bacillus alive permanently in America. It will die out in time, as the cholera bacillus always does when removed from India. Yet we do know that for a long time it will be possible for the ground squirrels to infect rats of adjacent towns and start new epidemics. It is high time to take up the European demand for a world-wide war on domestic rats, which subsist almost exclusively on the wastes of human habitations. Protection or destruction of garbage and the destruction of rats nests are essentials of existence now that populations are so dense. The rats must disappear, and the only way to do it is to starve them to death. Stables are the chief culprits and it is time for a revolution in their methods of management."
