Saturday in September. Was a lovely fall day with a light shower to lay the dust and cool off the August heat. It was also a fine day for work and though it was "Labor Day" or rather a rest day there was no let up seen, it was a hungry rush to get in all time possible. The crowd was small and these only stayed long enough to finish their call and go back home. There were no special sales, and nothing to interest—not even one yell from Mr. David.
