LITTLE SHOCK

and There Was Little Alarm Over It. Probably a Reflex of the General Disturbance Over the Earth

Some People Were Awakened. A little shock of earthquake was felt in Charleston Friday morning, causing some alarm among those who experienced it, but the seismic disturbance was not serious and did no damage except to scare timid peo-

The Post says the shock occurred at 3:30 o'clock and was said to have lasted between eight and ten seconds and to have been accompanied by a light roaring sound, puff of wind and wave motion, the disturbance seemingly moving from southeast to the northwest. The shock was more distinctly felt n Summerville than in Charleston, At the pineland resort, it is said to have been attended with the breaking of ornaments which fell from mantels, but this was exceptional.

While the shock was naturally nore generally felt in Summerville han in Charleston, at neither place did the disturbance reach any decided proportions or cause exits from houses or any stampede. The shock was quite perceptable but it was not comparable to the shocks which preceded the great earthquake of Tuesday night, August 31st, 1886.
There is no seismograph n Chareston and no register of the undula-tory motion of the earth could be redles, dipped in ink, moving over tab-ulated sheets, recording wind and rain variations, but none of these was affected, by the disturbances, which goes to show how mild the tremor really was.

The fact that a slight tremor was felt should cause little if any uneasiness for the press reports have been noting these disturbance for some time. Only a few days ago, reports of similar occurrences were heard
