The divorce courts of Chicago and other cities of the United States reveal strange motives of the martial infelicity. It has remained for the United States census bureau to collect the particulars of these frank divorces and compile them into a government report. For two years 120 agents of the census bureau have searched the court records of the country for odd and unusual features to divorce suits. The results of these two years' labor are soon to be presented in official form. With them will be preser ed the usual statistics girl screamed several times. revealing the growth of the divorce evil in the United States.

COMPARISON WITH OTHER CITIES. To appreciate the proportion of Chicago divorces from other cities may be compared. Boston promises 63 divorces in the 100,000 of population; Philadelphia 63, and New York 50 divorces. In these figures, how-ever, one may not read the story of the comparative marital unhappines in these cities. The New York law for one, is such as to show smaller oportion of divorces to the amount of domestic infelicity. It is only where virtue is conceded simply be cause a man and his wife live together the cat and dog life that others refuse to tolerate, that these comparative figures have a show at suggesting community morality.

Although divorces are on the in crease in the cities, they show a greater ratio of increase in the country districts, almost without excep-Why this situation without exists has been accounted for by the possibility that the life in country districts---in closer relation with th life of the cities .- has caused the farmers' wives to rebel more strong ly and effectively against the hard ships and monotony of the farm. In spite of the increase of the num divorces, Judge Robert Taylor, of the federl court of Ohio, recently called attention to the fact that never before in the history of the country had it been easier for a man to have a plurality of wives with less risk to his liberty. Under the judge's observations this might be a condition tending to lessen the application for divorce, only that in the band by all odds is more content with marital union.

In the opinion of Judge Taylor the best "routing" of a divorce tour at the present time should begin in South Carolina, where divorces are not recognized at all.

The new husband should remain with his bride in that state long enough to acquire citizenship. Going to some get-a-divorce-easy state the husband would file suit for a divorce on the ground of desertion, These papers would be sent to the sheriff of some other county in South Carolina than that in which the bride resided. Naturally, they would be served upon his wife, and returned unserved, the letter of the state law would be carried out, and the divorce granted without the wife's knowing anything about it. LEGALLY DEAD AFTER FIVE YEARS.

Chicago is another likely place if the divorced man seeks another venture. When he tires of this second venture, the judge advises his going to Arkansas, which has a system of automatic divorce accomplished by desertion. In this state the absence of wife or husband for five years makes the absentee member of the family legally dead. In Arkansas the man married in Chicago and leaving his bride there may sue for divorce on the ground of desertion, filing the summons to the defendant in some obscure corner of an obscure weekly paper.

Thereafter this man on the marriage route may go from state to state, acquiring matrimonial bonds here and divesting himself of them there, finally after five years return-posed over her husband to seek divorce is a question open to settlement from the two points of view of the two sexes. Is man so much more the intolerable brute that where all is serene to him the finer sensibilities of the wife suffer the agonies of the lost? Or is the woman so "uncertain, coy and hard to please" that the poor creature of coarser fiber but greater loyalty to his vows must be dragged by the heels into the disgrace of the courts?

Perhaps ome of the stories of dodecrees have been granted, and forth-coming divorce bulletin, may shed material light upon the question the wife had abstructed from his

BUTCHERS ASSAULTED

By Customers Because Price of Meat Was Raised. The Jewish quarter in Philadel phia was the scene of wild disorder when women of the quarter made do monstrations against all of the Kosher butchers as a protest against the increase in the price of beef. Shops were invaded by angry women, prospective customers driven out, windows broken and kerosene in number of instances poured over all meat in sight. A number of arrests were made by police, and reserves of three police districts were kept busy dispersing women and sympathizers.

Demonstrations were against two police station houses in which several of the women were held prison ers and police were compeled to us considerable force in dispersing the crowd.

wrecked locomotives tay side by side, both headed eastward. Only a few of the freight cars were damaged and it was only a few hours' work to remove all traces of them from the scene. But behind the two wrecked locomotives six cars of the passenger train lay piled in a hopeless wreck Four of the passenger coaches remained on the track undamaged and were used to convey the dead and injured to Ionia; one coach was entirely undamaged with only its forward trucks off the rails. These were the rear five cars. coaches next ahead of those were telscoped. The next car forward stood almost on end after the wreck, its forward end resting on the roadbed and the rear end high in the air upon the two telescoped coaches that had been following it.
