THURSDAY, JAN. 28, 1915

Give us this year good prices for cotton.

This winter has the record for rainy weather.

It is lonesome at last around the State penitentiary.

Take hold and go forward to the finish. Make this the rule for 1915.

Worry can do more damage in a day than hard work can do in a month.

Last week Governor Blease went out of office and the State convicts lost a friend.

Now that the State has a new governor, the State penitentiary will no doubt fill up again.

When Cole L. Blease resigned from the office of governor there went up a cheer in the halls of the Legislature.

Blease left the Governor's office with the record in this State for pardons. It does him no credit except with the convicts themselves.

Opportunities once neglected will never return again. Now is the time for this country to gain what Europe had in manufacturing industry.

The farmers of this country will have to take lessons from the experience of last year, and never again place their faith in too much of a money crop.

The result of the European war in regard to the cost of living, was to run down the price of cotton and tobacco and run up the price of meat and grain.

Some men expect to establish a good character by reason of one act of good that they claim to have done. They forget that character was not built in a day.

Governor Blease before going out of office sent here for the names of the prisoners serving on the chain gang of Horry County. Many thought that he must mean to pardon them, but he went out of office and nothing more was heard from it.

Let us hope that the European war does not involve the entire globe in bloody wars before it is over. So far as this country is concerned, she is trying to avoid such result. You can see it in every line that the leaders of this great republic are doing.

A friend of ex-governor Blease stated the other day that Blease would be reelected Governor two years hence. Well, we think not. The State has entered upon another change in its political life and it will be a long time before we do quite so early as that.

Blease said that he always stuck to his friends. The convicts must have been his friends, for he did not fail to stick to them.

Many people saw Richard I. Manning inaugurated last week with the feeling for the first time in many years that the State would now have at the helm, a man who would not only have State pride in name, but at heart also; and one whose acts would bear out his claims.

TYPHOID CARRIERS.

Now that the quality of public water has been greatly improved and the practice of milk pasteurization has been widely introduced, outbreaks of typhoid attributed to typhoid carriers are becoming more conspicuous than formerly, although probably they are not really more frequent. A remarkable epidemic due to food infected by a carrier was recently reported by Sawyer in a recent issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association, and while this was perhaps exceptional in the number of persons infected at one time, it emphasizes the grave danger of allowing carriers to have to do with the preparation or handling of food intended for general consumption. The still more recent typhoid outbreak at Lehigh University with more than fifty cases and several deaths has been traced likewise by the Pennsylvania State Department of Health to a kitchen employee who proved to be a healthy carrier. Such instances—and they are multiplying fast—suggest that wherever feasible, employees handling foods liable to spread infection should be examined for a possible typhoid reaction in the blood. In case the reaction is positive, and even when it is negative, but there is a definite history of typhoid fever, bacterial examination for typhoid germs should be made. Application of the test could probably be made with little inconvenience in connection with the student dining halls of many educational institutions where proper bacteriologic facilities and expert service exist. We know of at least one American university where such a routine examination of the employees concerned in the handling of food has been practiced for several years past. The disaster at Lehigh shows that such precautions are justified, and that with our present knowledge of typhoid causation some responsibility in this regard may be justly expected from college authorities. There are also many hospitals, sanitoriums and public institutions in which the necessary facilities and skill for such examinations exist or could be readily provided and here, too, it is true that to be forewarned is to be forearmed. In the future uncomfortable questions may be asked when carrier outbreaks occur in large institutions that are provided with bacteriologic facilities.

PLEASURE ON OCEAN

HOMER CROY WRITES OF THE DELIGHTS OF VOYAGE.

Folding Wash Basins a Novelty to Him, Also Acrobatic Feats Necessary to Land Successfully in the Upper Berth.

With my two suitcases I went banging down the narrow aisles—gangways they call them on a ship—hunting my stateroom, writes Homer Croy in Leslie's Weekly. Just as I found it a couple of boys came running to help me carry my stuff. The stateroom was about as big as a room you pay three dollars a week for in New York. After looking around I began to get worried, for I couldn't find a washstand. Their furniture seemed to run to desks built into the wall, for there were two of them. It seemed strange that they would make desks without any washbasin, but when I went to examine one of the desks it opened out of the wall into a washstand. When through with it all a person had to do was to fold it up and it was out of the way. That was a new one on me—a washstand that could be folded up like an accordion and put in the wall.
The berths were on top of each other, like berths in a Pullman—and mine was on top. It had high mud guards and was reached by means of a ladder—the kind of ladder they use in shoe stores when the first two pairs don't fit. Climbing up it, I paused on the top shelf and with the rocking of the ship I began to feel that something was going to happen. I turned and looked down and began to know how Jacob felt when he made mental calculations concerning what his ladder rested against. I began to see that something was going to happen to somebody unless the trip was soon over with. Hooking my heel over the throwboard I started to give a heave, but the ladder lurched down the track, leaving me hanging onto my berth by my heel. Plunk went my free foot onto something solid, then there was a commotion in the berth beneath me. I was standing on my traveling companion. "Get off!" he yelled, while under me I felt a mighty reaving and tossing. Grabbing hold of the sideboards on my bed I drew myself up, freed my foot and lowered myself.
"You've got to go to bed first," he said, tumbling out and rubbing himself.
"You steady the ladder," I said, "and I'll make it."
Fearfully he seized the ladder and held it as I climbed up and flopped into my berth—to find that I was on top of the covers and that they were tucked so far under that I could not raise them until I had backed down the ladder and up again.

Photographs by Wire.

A photograph in London can be reproduced in Paris on the same principle as a telegram within the space of 40 minutes. This has already been achieved by the Photo-Telegraph Cable company and a practical demonstration was given recently to experts and journalists at the Hotel Cecil.
By means of the invention, the "Teletograph," a newspaper, a theater, a private person, can receive in a few minutes from a place hundreds of miles away a pictorial representation of current events. Police authorities also will be able to circulate the photographs of wanted criminals in several towns with lightning swiftness, whilst clubmen will be able to see faithful representations of people "in the news," just as now they are able to read the news itself on the "tickers."

Novel Burglar Alarm.

A novel burglar alarm has been placed on the market in Germany, composed of a small metal disk, circular in shape, which may easily be carried in the vest pocket. It is so arranged that a detonating cap may be inserted, and so loaded it becomes a terror to sneak thieves. Suppose a traveler is staying in a strange hotel and finds that he cannot lock his door. He places a chair against the door and slips the disk under one of its legs. Should anyone attempt to enter the room the chair is forced out of position, the disk flies open and the cap explodes, awakening the sleeper. The disk may be used under baggage, in purses, under bicycle or automobile tires and in many other ways.

Oldest College Graduate.

Rev. John Merrick of York, Pa., is believed to be not only the oldest graduate of Rutgers college, but the oldest college graduate. He was graduated at Rutgers in 1824. His age is one hundred and one, and at the commencement the other day a letter from him was read, in which it was said: "Former things have passed away, but it brings joy into my aged life to know that you are still going forward with a great and good work among new generations."

Sad Ending of Expedition.

Captain Leisey, leader of the Congo to Cairo motor car expedition, has died as the sequel to the injuries which he received on April 12 while leopard hunting. Thus tragically ends the Cape to Cairo expedition, which started so auspiciously, the king himself receiving its members at Buckingham palace, the Duchess of Argyll christening the car, the government contributing to it with a £10,000 grant, and friends in Europe contributing to it here and there.

POSTED A WOODEN SENTRY

Harmless Deceit That Brought Peace and Health to Sensitive Unfortunate Royal Lady.

In 1805 Ferdinand IV was driven from the throne of Naples. All the members of his family, except an aged half-sister, fled to Sicily.

The victorious French, who had driven Ferdinand from the throne, treated the old lady with every consideration. The new king, Joseph Bonaparte, left her property and her income virtually intact. But he did order that the sentry who always had stood before the door of the princess and had saluted when she passed, should be removed. And on this point, in spite of the princess' pleas, he remained firm. The Bourbons ceased to reign, he said, and no royal honors could properly be accorded to a member of the family.

The loss of this mark of respect wounded the princess more deeply than many more serious losses had done. For the first time she felt herself an outcast, an exile in her own land. She grieved so steadily that her strength began to fail.

Finally the loyal servants, who had stayed with their mistress, decided to resort to a subterfuge in order to restore the old lady's spirits. Accordingly they fashioned a great wooden soldier, or dignified and martial appearance; on this dummy, they painted the gay uniform of the Neapolitan grenadier. They set the figure in a sentry box by the gate of the princess' residence, and waited for their mistress to drive out.

They counted on the nearsightedness of the princess, and on the fact that she always passed through the gate in her carriage, to make the ruse successful. And when at last the carriage did pass, they saw by the glad flush that came to the princess' face that she had not detected the deception.

From that time the princess revived. The sentry never left his post, and the princess never discovered the ruse by which her loyal servants had restored her spirits and her health. But occasionally she did complain that under the new regime, soldiers did not present arms, as they had done in the days when her brother was king.—Der Gute Kamerad.

Adaptable Shirt.

The head of the house came down stairs in a great rage.
"Where's my tennis shirt—the cellular one? Never can find a thing in this house."
"Do you mean the old one you had last year?" his wife interposed soothingly. "I told Dorothy she could have it."
"Old one! I only wore it twice. And what the deuce does my daughter want with my shirts?"
"Well, you see, dear, she wanted a blouse in a hurry for that garden party on Saturday. She was hunting round for some material and found your shirt. The wide sleeves, the turndown collar and breast pocket were all the latest thing in blouses. She only had to shorten the sleeves, lower the neck and sew on three buttons, and in a few minutes the dear, clever girl had a new blouse. You haven't another one for Margaret, have you?"—Manchester Guardian.

Admirer of "Manly Art."

More encouragement is now being given in England to the practice of "the manly art of self-defense" than has obtained for more than a generation. Two men were brought, the other day, before a West London police court magistrate on a charge of having fought on Brook Green common. They said they had a quarrel and went out on the green with nature's weapons to settle it.
"Ah," said the magistrate, with difficulty suppressing his sympathy and admiration, "you went to a public common to settle your differences in a way Englishmen used to do more frequently than now—more's the pity! You were not interfering with anyone or obstructing people, and I shall discharge you."

Gets Ring Lost Many Years.

Mrs. Rosa Kenney Winston of Windsor, N. C., has just received from Secretary Daniels a ring which her father, Doctor Kenney, ship surgeon, lost on the historic ship Constellation at the close of the Civil war.
When Mrs. Winston learned the Constellation was undergoing repairs for exhibition at the "Star-Spangled Banner" anniversary in Baltimore, she wrote to Secretary Daniels.
The ring was found under the iron covering plates of the anchor bits on the gun deck forward, where it had reposed more than forty years.

Bees Create New Variety of Potatoes.

The busy little bee is responsible for a new variety of potato, which was grown on the farm of Harvey K. Bradley, near Spokane, Wash. It is a cross between the "Durbank" and "Million Dollar" varieties.
The bees carried pollen from the blossoms of one patch to the blossoms of the other and started the new variety, which is said to be better than the other two.

Indian Dancers Are Irish.

A stage dancer in London says that the next dancer who will be famous will not be an Indian or a Persian. "It'll be the Irish," she says. "As a matter of fact, most of the famous 'Indian dancers' of today are Irish." America has contributed her share. They have come from everywhere—but none.

ACCORDING to the Commission for Relief in Belgium, the American people will probably have to feed the Belgian people all this winter. "We have taken pains to investigate," said one of the commissioners last week, "and the best informed Europeans tell us that there will be no change in the military situation this winter. It means that we must keep up the work until spring breaks or longer."
It has been a race with hunger, this business of feeding 6,500,000 people with supplies gathered a half a world away. All Belgium depends on American food. Half of Belgium is never more than a week ahead of starvation. Often it has come closer than that. Once the province of Limbourg, remote and hilly, was starving. In some communities the people had not eaten for two days, when one of our United States consuls managed to borrow from the Germans enough bread to keep the people alive until an American shipment arrived to repay the loan. Once Captain Lucey, the shipping agent in Holland, had to borrow 10,000 tons of wheat from the Dutch government. Liege and Hamme and historic Ghent were crying for bread, and it was still several days before the next American ship was due at Rotterdam. This was a real thing for Holland to do since the Dutch themselves are short on food. Yes, it is a race with hunger, and America now that she has faced the winter, must win. This is America's great and glorious part in the world war of 1914-15.
That every American may have a personal chance to help some Belgian, the Commission for Relief in Belgium has arranged its "parcel post plan." Any one who wants to send a package containing between twenty and fifty pounds of nonperishable food need only put a tag on the package, address the tag to the nearest collection depot of the commission, stamp it in the regular way and drop it in the mail chute. If the giver puts on the package tag his name and address, TOGETHER WITH THE LETTER "R," the money he has spent for stamps will be refunded.
Packages mailed from SOUTH CAROLINA should be addressed to SOUTHEASTERN WAREHOUSE COMPANY, CHARLESTON; MANUFACTURERS' WAREHOUSE COMPANY, GREENVILLE; who are collecting agents for this district.
