

SUBMARINE RAMMED GERMANY CLAIMS

By British Tank Steamer After Ordered to Stop for Search

WILL HAVE HEARING ON AMERICAN STAND

Germans Assert That England Took Unfair Means in Several Instances.

A statement given out by the German admiralty to the effect that the German submarine U-29 had been rammed and sunk by a British tank steamer after the vessel had been ordered to stop is expected to have an important bearing on the German-American negotiations. German naval officers and the public at large ask how it is possible for German submarines to treat merchantmen in the way requested by the United States or to take steps to ascertain the nationality of ships displaying neutral flags in the war zone so long as the British captains adhere to the rules laid down by the admiralty.

The announcement published by the German admiralty regarding the fate of the U-29, which was made in a most positive form, and as if the German admiralty had conclusive evidence upon which to base its statement, will, in the opinion of well informed persons here, make a deeper impression on the public mind than would almost any other possible event here of Germany.

Capt. Weddingen, the commander of the U-29, was a popular hero in Germany, ranking in popular esteem with the army leader, Field Marshall von Hindenburg.

The loss of the German undersea boat under the circumstances, prominent Germans say, probably will stiffen the nation in the belief that it is impossible to introduce any changes in submarine methods so long as Great Britain does not at least withdraw its instructions regarding neutral flags and attacks upon submarines.

Under the headline of "Weddingen and the American Note," the Kreuz Zeitung in a leading article today resumed consideration of submarine warfare. The newspaper declares that the fate of the U-29, as announced by the German admiralty, demonstrates the danger of first investigating and then sinking ships, and raises the assumption that the German success would have been much greater if this consideration had been discarded.

"The incident further shows plainly," the newspaper continues, "what meaning America's demand has that submarines should not torpedo even enemy merchantmen without first halting and searching them. It would be a complete surrender of the advantage due to tactical superiority of the German submarines and that is not possible."

"Without Scruple."
"We have all due respect for America's business interests, but we must reserve the right to try to keep American ammunition from our enemies without scruple and with all the means at our disposal, and to cause every conceivable damage to Great Britain in this war of destruction which is forced upon us. Therefore the American demand to render ineffective our submarine war against every ship carrying American passengers is for us wholly impossible."

Count Revaultow, the naval critic, in a leading article along a similar vein, says:
"It is a moral duty to extract every possible advantage from the submarine weapon. Germany can not let this weapon be shut up in a cage whose bars are formed by threatening notes of the United States and by international regulations.
"Now is the time for Germany to inform the world clearly and sharply

HERO AND WRITER.

Was in Search for Material. For a Story When Killed.

Lieut. Reginald A. J. Warneford, who gained fame recently by blowing to pieces a Zeppelin in flight over Belgium, was killed by the fall of an aeroplane at Buc, France last week.

Lieut. Warneford was piloting the machine, which had as a passenger Henry Beech Needham, the American writer, who also was killed.

Lieut. Warneford and Needham fell from a height of 500 feet. The lieutenant had been spending a few days in Paris, where he came after the Zeppelin exploit to receive his decoration of the Legion of Honor. According to a report received in Paris the accident resulted from an explosion in mid-air which caused Lieut. Warneford to lose control, the machine crashing to earth.

Needham's body was taken to the English hospital in Trianon palace, Versailles. He had been in Europe about four months, acting as correspondent of a magazine and a New York newspaper. He had received permission from the military authorities to make flight in order to get material for a story.
