

HOPE IS HELD FOR M'EAHERNS LIFE

Hamer Man Said to Have Fair Chance For Recovery.

E. B. McEachern, who was brought to the Florence Infirmary Saturday night suffering from injuries received in an automobile accident, Dillon, was reported to have a fairly good chance for recovery by physicians at the infirmary. He is injured internally, his collar bone is broken and several ribs were broken. There is a serious injury also on his head. When Mr. McEachern was brought here Saturday night there was little hope for his recovery.

The accident occurred on the Dillon-Hamer road on Saturday afternoon when Mr. McEachern driving a high powered sedan lost control of the car and it ran into a ditch by the road striking a stump and smashing the car to pieces. W. B. Wheeler, who was riding with Mr. McEachern escaped unhurt.

The machine is said to have been going at a fast rate of speed when the crash came. It is said that both men would have been killed if it had not been for the heavy construction of the top and framework of the sedan, all of which, however, was twisted and wrecked. Mr. McEachern was at first attended by physicians at Dillon who decided that it would be best to bring him to the hospital here.

According to the correspondent of the News and Courier Mr. McEachern has been a familiar figure in Dillon for a number of years. He has been a heavy cotton speculator at times, having, it is said about $100,000 or more in his credit from dealings on the New York exchange. He also was a tuit on spot cotton, carrying at times as much as 1,500 bales in his farm warehouses. It is said that he was several hundred bales of spot cotton on hand at the present time, which he has carried for two years or more. His home is near Hamer, where he has always lived. He is about fifty-five years of age and has many friends in this section who will be grieved to learn of his accident.

believe liquor was there manufactured for any purpose. Reveals Meaning of Amendment. Representative Fields (Dem., Ky.) revealed the meaning of the amendment when he offered a motion to strike out the words "for sale." He appealed without result for the support of all who believed in Prohibition, contending that the law would be weakened if the words were allowed to stand. "If you say an illicit distillery may be established in every home," he declared, "you kill the Volstead act." The House declined to follow him and voted down his amendment, 54 supporting it to 96 against. The new search and seizure amendment, as adopted by the House, was offered by Chairman Volstead, for the Judiciary Committee, as a substitute for the Stanley amendment of the Senate, which was broader and forbade the search and seizure process applying anywhere. As this is the weakest proposition which will be before the conferees of the House and Senate, the home brewer or distiller is certain to be free from interference. The amendment reads: "That no officer, agent or employee of the United States, while engaged in the enforcement of the National Prohibition Act, or any law in reference to the manufacture or taxation of, or traffic in intoxicating liquor, shall search any private dwelling without a warrant directing such search, and no such warrant shall issue unless there is reason to believe such dwelling is used as a place in which liquor is manufactured for sale or sold. "The term 'private dwelling' shall be construed to include the room or room occupied not transiently but solely as a residence in an apartment house, hotel or boarding house. Any violation of any provision of this paragraph shall be punished by a fine of not to exceed $1,000 or imprisonment not to exceed one year, or both, such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court." Proposals to broaden the definition of dwelling to include automobiles were turned down. In attacking the Senate Amendment Mr. Volstead said if it were adopted "we might as well quit trying to enforce any Prohibition law. The object of that amendment is clearly to take away from the officers the power to enforce it. It makes it a criminal offense if they go and search anywhere, no matter if it is in the open field out in the country or search a home. It makes it illegal to search an automobile. It makes it illegal to search a man who is in the act of violating the law, a right which has always been recognized throughout the country and throughout England." Mr. Volstead, however, favored the substitute adopted by the House saying later that that amendment would not change the policy of the Washington.—Home brew and the home still received unexpected sanction in the House of Representatives. Hereafter officers who go prying into private dwellings without warrants will be subjected to heavy fines or imprisonment or both if they do not have a search warrant, "and no such warrant," in the language of the new amendment, "shall issue unless there is reason to believe such dwelling is used as a place in which liquor is manufactured for sale or sold." The protection for home brew, as pointed out during debate, is contained in the words "for sale." Had they been left out, as well attempted on the floor, then search warrants could be issued on reason to Prohibition Enforcement Bureau with regard to home brewing. Making of potent beverages for personal consumption, he declared, had not been interfered with recently by Washington.

A special rule was invoked to lay the Anti-Beer Bill before the House for consideration of Senate amendments. The rule was adopted by a vote of 255 to 50 after a short colloquy in which the Anti-Saloon League was criticised.

Representative Stafford (Rep., Wis.) raised one point that the Prohibition measure was displacing other matters before the House.

"Unfortunately," said Mr. Walsh (Rep., Mass.) "the gentleman was not a member of the last Congress. If he had been he would know that anything touching the Prohibition takes precedence of anything else before the Congress, and that everybody else must give way when the juggernaut operated by Mr. Wayne B. Wheeler is to be put in operation."

"Although I was not a member of the last Congress," Mr. Stafford replied, "nevertheless I have been here long enough to know that everything yields to the dragon whip of the Anti-Saloon League, as has been demonstrated from time to time in this short session."

An effort by Representative Ward (Dem., N. C.) to have a provision included safeguarding property was refused consideration as not being germane.

HOME FARMERS SETTLE IN PERU

Lima, Peru.—A group of American farmers, comprising the advance guard of a colonization scheme said to involve more than two hundred families from the western United States, arrived here recently en route to the Pampa del Sacramento valley along the eastern head waters of the Amazon river, in northern Peru, where the colony is to be established.

The party is in charge of J. B. Schoenfelt, of Okmulgee, Okla., formerly United States Indian agent for Oklahoma territory, who obtained, for colonization purposes, a grant of 650,000 acres of agricultural and forestry lands from the Peruvian government last October.

After the preliminary location of the lands in the concession is completed, it is planned to bring the remaining colonists, numbering about 800, to the settlement via Paris, Brazil, and the Amazon and Ucayali rivers. The former is navigable from its mouth on the Atlantic ocean to Luitos, Peru, about 2,000 miles.

In an interview published in the West Coast Leader, Mr. Schoenfelt said that owing to drought and crop failure, a number of farmers in the central west had expressed their desire to seek more fertile and profitable fields.

"I decided to look over South America," he said "since most of the American government's desirable vacant lands, that could be obtained at a low price have been allotted to foreign immigrants. The colonists, who are chiefly from the west, are farmers of some means and they can secure their farms at a cost of a few cents per acre simple to their lands, as soon as 200 families have been settled on the concession."

Asking Too Much.

There recently entered the employ of a bank in a Western town a watchman who had come with splendid letters of recommendation. The president of the bank sent for the new man and proceeded to post him as to his duties. Well Richard, he said, this is your first job of this kind, isn't it? Yes sir. Your duty must be to exercise vigilance. Yes sir. Be careful how strangers approach you. I will sir. No stranger must be allowed to enter the bank at night under any circumstances whatever. No, sir. And our manager—he is a good man, honest and trustworthy; but it will be your duty to keep your eyes on him. But it will be hard to watch two men, sir and the bank at the same time. Two men, how? Why sir, it was only yesterday the manager called me in for a talk and he said you were one of the best men in town, but it would be just as well to keep both eyes on you, and let the directors know if you hung about after hours.—Houston Post.
