

SKIPPER LEAVES FRENCH SPOUSE

Matrimonial Venture Hits the Rocks Here, After a Year of Experience

A romance begun in France ended here last week with abruptness and finality. O. G. Skipper and his wife, Lucy Skipper, who were married in France while Skipper was a member of the American forces, parted, and will hereafter live separately.

Skipper was one of the American boys doing duty in France, when he met the young French woman and the romance began which ended in their marriage, and at the cessation of the war he brought her as his bride to this country. They lived in a cottage here for the past year.

Lucy had a sister in this country. Recently the union of this sister with another soldier (navy) had the same bad luck, for the sister, Violet Budzack by name, came here some months ago to live with Mr. and Mrs. Skipper. On her arrival here she is said to have stated that she would live with Budzack no more. She exhibited her back and shoulders whereon there appeared numerous blue streaks left from the lash, which she said had been applied to her by her husband.

Things went from bad to worse with the Skippers recently. Not long since Skipper left home showing signs of a combat. It was said that the weapons used were sticks of stove wood. It is alleged that this difficulty came about by reason of some letters found by Skipper one night when the wife and her sister were away at night school.

Last week there was a public sale of the furniture and personal belongings of O. G. Skipper in front of the town hall. He had moved out of the cottage occupied by them and said he was done.
