L. W. Perrin, Esq., was Chairman of the meeting and Mr. J. C. Miller was

The meeting was harmonious and pleasant. A free interchange of ideas was had, nealy every delegate taking part in the discussion. They spoke as one man, and each of the delegates gave expression to the belief that the townships along the line of the road from Greenwood to Enright would willingly vote a tax for its construction.

The subject of a charter was thoroughly discussed and all agreed that Mr. Blake's charter of a road from Green wood to Elberton, now on its passage in the General Asssembly, would enable the company to organize as soon as it could become a law at the next sitting of the Legislature. Some amendments to that charter were deemed necessary. On motion of Prof. S. P. Boozer, Mess.

L. W. Perrin, M. L. Bonham, L. W. White were appointed a committe to draft a charter which would meet with the requirements of the proposed road. Dr. Maxwell thought that Mr. Blake

The following resolutions were adopted as embodying the views of the con-

Resolved, That this conference is impressed by the importance of a Railroad line from Athens, Ga. through Elberton, Ga. Abbeville, S. C. Greenwood, S. C. to the North Carolina line at some point most convenient to desirable Railroad connections beyond.

That we are ready with one influence energy and means to contribute to the success of this enterprise. That in order to secure harmonious and concurrent action between the cities, towns, and townships along the route, we invite and encourage conferences and correspondence upon this matter.

That a committee consisting of L. W. Perrin, W. K. Blake, L. W. White and M. L. Bonham, Jr., be appointed to secure a charter for the proposed Railroad within the state of South Carolina. J. C. Miller.

Dedication.

The handsome Catholic Church building just crected in our town will be dedicated on next Sunday by Bishop Northrop assisted by several of the Catholic Clergymen of the diocese. The ceremonies will begin at 10.30 a. m. by the blessing of the exterior of the building, during which the Bishop and Clergy will march in procession around the outside of the church, sprinkling the walls with holy water and chanting appropriate psalms. This being done the procession moves into the church and the Litany of the Saints is sung. At week, the conclusion of the Litany a solemn blessings is invoked by the Bishop who then proceeds to bless the interior of the church returning to the Sanctuary where the final prayer is said. Solemn High Mass will follow immediately which will be sung by a choir of select voices under the direction of the distinguished Madame Barbot of Charleston. Mousignor Quigley Vicar General of the Dioceso will officiate and Bishop Northrop will deliver a discourse appropriate to the occasion.

At 7.20 p. m. solemn Vespers will be sung a cer which Bishop Northrop will preach a sermon on some of the doctrines and teachings of church.

The services will close with Benedic tion of the Blessed Sacrament. The church will be open for the morning services at 10 a. m and for the evening services at 7 p. m. We are obliged to Col. J. W. Holloway, Secretary, for a season ticket to State Fair on Nov. 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th. It be will seen in these columns that the passenger and freight rates are low. This Fair promises to he one of the bett ever given by the Association. The exhibits in all the departments are very full, that of stock will be especially fine. Columbia is offering various attractions to visitors and our people S.C. Troops. will do well to go down in force. The occasion will be one of pleasure and profit.

While the Treasurer was collecting taxes at Due West, a darkey by the name of John Brown, came up to pay his tax, and having failed to make his return, his name could not be found on the book. Being informed that such was the case he immediately started on back with an order for the Treasurer to collect from him the rmount of poll. Such willingness to pay taxes is seldom exhibited, and we mention this as an exceptional case.

Mess. Blake and Giles of Greenwood, Rithey and Magill of Hodges, Moore and Moris of Cokesbury, Johston of Laurins and Genl's Youman and Moise are in attendance on Court.

A Novel Exhibition.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch compliments Cole's Circus very highly in the following manner: "The performance was, without question, one of the very best ever given here, and demonstrated most perfectly that it is not necessary for enterprising managers to keep in the same stereotyped track in presenting attractions. Cole's Circus is full of new and novel features, not only demonstrating remarkable ingenuity of tropic sun, "which sinks at once and in the selection of the features, but also all is night." involving remarkable skill in presenting them. The double ring and elevated stage are occupied constantly and give at the same time varied and non-conflicting performances, which can be appreciated and enjoyed at the same time The Bedouin Arabs, the Mexican exhibition, the equestrian pig and monkey, the artistic and grotesque roller skaters the marvelous "human fly," M'lle Aimee, the athletes, bare-back riding, the clowns and the riding of Leon, the wonder, and the daring feats of George Conklin, the lion tamer, are but a tithe of the multitude of features offered at his great show. The double meragerie, the museum and wax work collec tion, the two headed cow, the herd of performing elephants, headed by the monster Sampson, and the equine wonder, Blodin, the tight-rope walking horse, may also be mentioned as wonderfully interesting features. In a word, Cole's Circus is, beyond a doubt, one of the best ever exhibited iu St. Louis, and so far as keeping up with the times is concerned, it may be said to be leading other shows in the matter of novelty and attractiveness. Afternoon and evening performances will be given daily." The peop e of Abbeville and sur-rounding country will have an oppostu-nity of seeing this collossal show in its entirety, on Tuesday, October 27th.

wife Eliza Bowie, the youngest of a family of twelve sons and one daughter. Of these, only the aged father and four of his sons survive. Charles was born at the homestead on the outskirts of Abbeville, a town which owes not a little of the second of the Charles Wardlaw was the youngest tle of its historic lustre to the family name he bore. Here he lived and thrived until a lad of sixteen years he left school, joined the Confederate army as a private and went to the war, he being the ninth son whom his father and mother had suffered to leave their quiet home and march to the scenes of strife and death. Of these nine brothers two gave up their lives to their Southern country's cause. After the war in the universal wreck of fortunes in South Carolina, anxious to help his parents as best he might, Charles Wardlaw followed the plough on the home plantation for nearly five years. Thereafter he went to Augusta, Georgia, where he modestly took the lowest position in a commercial house, and by merit he rose higher, until at the end of seven years he filled the highest office in that house. From Augusta he went to New York and filled a responsible post in the house of Moore, Jenkins & Co., until it failed about five years ago, when he was immediately employed by the great metropolitan house of Thurber, Whyland & Co. He was held in the highest esteem by all in that emporium, from the principals to the humblest clerk, in their service; and in that service he was steadily and honorably advancing. Just last Christmas he brought his bride from New Orleans-Jeanie, daughter of A. J. Wither-spoon, D. D., brought her to Abbeville; and his own friends and his father's triends well remember how his frank face beamed with joy at the kindness and warmth of the welcome given to her he loved so truly. At the close of the season of hotiday and merriment, he returned to New York, his young wife accompanying him. Young, strong, in the flush and vigor of manhood, trusted, respected and beloved by all, to our shortsighted ken it seemed that Charles Wardlaw had only just begun a long, successful and honorable career in the world of commerce, whose close should not be until that ripe old age to which the long lives of his parents and their progenitors might have tempted him to look forward. On the third of last August advised so to do by his physicians, he went to the New York hospital to submit to a simple operation in surgery. In perfect health and with buoyant spirits he bade his friends goodbye, told them where he was going and that he would see them next morning. Next morning he was dead.

Frail man, his days are like the grass.

In the morning it is green and groweth p, in the evening it is cut down, dried p and withered. The impression made on his friends here and elsewhere by the tidings of his death, so sudden and so sad, will not soon be forgotten. It was hard for any soon be forgotten. It was hard for any of us his friends to believe or comprehend that his light and joyous spirit was quenched in the night of death. But life had closed for him, swift as the eve

Few men of his years had as many friends as Charles Wardlaw, and very few deserved to have them as did he. Attractive in personal appearance to an unusual degree, he was still more so in his manners and his character. Who that ever met him failed to be charmed by his genial manners, the outward token of a warm heart and a sound head? While his strength of understanding, decision of character and high sense of duty, impressed every one who knew him. In his heart and life, in his walk and conversation, he filled up the measure of a gentleman, and a true son of South Carolina. He was pious too, with a piety that was the more beautiful because so unassuming; its modesty was proof of its sincerity. What he was to those of his own household, to his aged parents, to his brothers, to their wives and children, the world will never know. From the venerable father to the last born grand-child, he was the loved of all; and they for his sake will comfort as they only can the sorrow-stricken wife, so lately a bride, so soon a widow. When the young soldier falls in battle, the cloud of sorrow is fringed with glory. When the legislator or professional man is struck down in the pride of youth and on the threshold of his fame, an admiring public mourns his death. And shall we be silent when the young man of business dies, albeit he has passed his days in that less public walk of life where commerce holds her sway? We may all learn a lesson from the life of Charles Wardlaw. He lived and worked as one who knew that by being diligent in business he was serving the Lord; and when he died, old and young, rich and poor, did him honor and mourned over his grave. The great merchant whom he served so faithfully, said to those he left behind in the house of business: "In your lives and in the conduct of my business let Charlie Wardlaw be your example." And the little message boy, humblest in that vast establishment, with tears in his eyes begged to be allowed to give a few pence to help to buy the flowers that decked his bier.

Thus lived, thus died Charles Coffin Wardlaw, his too short life an example to all of love and duty to God and
