Wad Some Power. The study of human nature would probably be one of the most interesting lines of research one could adopt. A reporter has no time for such an undertaking but one news-gatherer happened yesterday to be very forcibly impressed with a certain feature of human nature's many funny traits. Coming into Anderson on a car he overheard two gentlemen talking. Both of whom seemed to know more about how to run the cotton mills of the country than any man ever yet heard of in that business. Likewise they knew more about how to run the Democratic administration than Woodrow Wilson, and they were equally as well informed on any other subject. Finally they began to discuss the "knocker" and they expressed a very decided opinion about what a miserable creature he is after having engaged in that pastime them-selves all the way from Greenville to Greenwood.

SHE HAS HIP POCKETS.

What could be nobler on this severely tailored mohair and wool skirt than the patch pockets that are quite out of the way of the tennis game, yet handy for the mouchoir and for, say, car fare?

Rough on the Old Maids.

In a quiet English village there was recently held a celebration in the schoolroom at the dedication of a new fire engine. It was a giddy evening, with three speeches by local clergymen and a long-winded oration by a bald-headed politician. The gem of the evening was the following toast: "May she (the fire engine) be like the dear old maids of our village—always ready, but never wanted!"

In Her New Place.

"How are you getting on at your new place?" remarked a lady of a girl whom she had recommended for a situation. "Very well, thank you," answered the girl. "I am glad to hear it," said the lady. "Your employer is a very nice person, and you cannot do too much for her." "I don't mean to ma'am," was the innocent reply.

THE LATE THOMAS G. CLEMSON

Sketch of the Founder of Clemson College—Wsa Son-in-law of John C. Calhoun and Himself a Scholar and Diplomat and a Distinguished Man

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF THOMAS G. CLEMSON

(By Hon. R. W. Simpson, Published in 1897.)

Thomas G. Clemson was born in the city of Philadelphia, July 1807, died at Fort Hill April 6th, 1888, and was buried in the Episcopal churchyard at Pendleton, S. C.

Mr. Clemson was six feet, six inches tall, his features were handsome, and his appearance commanding; his deportment and manners were of a high order, and he was gifted with fine conversational powers. His views and opinions were broad and liberal, and there was nothing narrow or contracted about him; with all he was firm and tenacious in adhering to his conclusions. He was remarkably quick to discover and comprehend the character of his associates, and in forming his opinions of them he was almost always correct.

Mr. Clemson no doubt may have had his faults, and in some things he was peculiar, but during the long time the writer was intimately associated with him, he was never known to do a mean thing or heard to backbite or speak disrespectfully of any one. While possessed of ample means he had no disposition to spend more money upon himself than was actually necessary. His greatest desire was to take care of his property and increase it that he might the better carry out his promise to his wife, which was to found an agricultural college upon the Fort Hill estate, upon the very spot she herself had selected for the location of the main college building. How faithfully he redeemed his promise to his dear wife, let Clemson College as it stands today in all its magnificence speak. Mr. Clemson well knew that the property donated for the purpose would not be sufficient to build and maintain such a college as he conceived of, but having a firm reliance upon the liberality of the state of South Carolina, he felt assured that when the necessities of the people, growing out of their changed conditions resulting from the effects of war, were properly understood and appreciated, his efforts to benefit the farmers would be recognized; and that the state would supplement his donation by whatever amount might be necessary to establish the dream of his life. He reasoned wisely and correctly.

Very early in life Mr. Clemson developed a great taste for the study of the sciences, especially chemistry, mineralogy and geology. In 1823, when hardly sixteen years of age, he ran off from his home, not on account of any disagreement with his parents, but simply for adventure and to see the world. At that time he, though so young, was six feet tall and exceedingly handsome, both in form and features. At this time France was particularly friendly toward the United States and his handsome young American very soon attracted the attention of the young nobility of that great city. Through these young men he also became acquainted with some of the leading officials of the day. During his stay in Paris he shouldered a musket and joined his young friends in several of the revolutions of outbreaks for which that city has been famous. His gallantry displayed on these occasions earned for him the respect and esteem of the officials, who rewarded him with a position in the celebrated School of Mines. He remained in the school for four years and graduated with high honors. During his stay in Paris he also found time to indulge in his taste for painting, and had as his teachers some of the celebrated artists of that time. By these means, he became acquainted with many painters both in France and Germany, which enabled him in after years to collect the many rare and beautiful paintings which now adorn the walls of John C. Calhoun's old home at Fort Hill.

During his stay in Europe his father died and the large estate was divided in such a way as to leave him no part of it. Just at the age of manhood he found himself penniless; but he set cheerfully to work in the practice of his profession and very soon earned an enviable reputation. His services as a mine expert were particularly valuable, and though established in Washington, his labors were not confined to this country alone, but extended to Cuba and South America also. His fees were large and he very soon amassed a comfortable fortune. At Washington he was a conspicuous and prominent person, and he had entry into the most exclusive families. Miss Anna Maria, the eldest daughter of John C. Calhoun was in Washington on a visit to her father, and there Mr. Clemson met her, and subsequently they were married at Fort Hill.

Mrs. Clemson was among women what her distinguished father was among men. Her love for her home and country was superb, and to this noble generous and yet gentle woman, South Carolina is as much indebted for Clemson College as to her distinguished husband, Thos. G. Clemson. Mr. Clemson was a great admirer of John C. Calhoun, and earnestly supported his political views and opinions. During the administration of President Jackson he was appointed minister to Belgium, but having little taste for politics at the expiration of his term he returned to Washington and resumed the work of his profession.

At the beginning of the war Mr. Clemson was residing at his home in Washington city with his family, which consisted of his wife and son, John C. Clemson and daughter Florida Clemson—the son and daughter about grown.

It was well known to the authorities that the sympathies of Mr. Clemson were with the south, and for this reason his movements were closely watched, and some time in 1862 his arrest was ordered; but being warned in time he fled that he would be arrested the next day, he and his son escaped during the night, and crossed the Potomac in a row boat. Landed on Virginia soil, they did not stop until they reached Richmond, having walked the entire distance. Upon arriving in Richmond they both tendered their services to President Davis. John C. was at once appointed a Lieutenant in the army and assigned to duty. Mr. Clemson was assigned to the mining department of the trans-Mississippi Territory. Here he remained in the service until the close of the war. At this time Mrs. John C. Calhoun resided at Pendleton; and here Mr. Clemson was re-united with his family, and her they resided until the death of Mrs. Calhoun in the latter part of 1866.

Previous to the war Mrs. Calhoun had sold their old home, Fort Hill, and all her property thereon to her son, Col. Andrew P. Calhoun, taking his bond and mortgage for the purchase money. Of this bond and mortgage Mrs. Calhoun willed three-fourths to her daughter, Mrs. Thos. G. Clemson, and one-fourth to Mrs. Clemson's daughter, Miss Florida, who subsequently married Mr. Gideon Lee of New York. The mortgage of Col. A. P. Calhoun was foreclosed and Mrs. Clemson bought in Fort Hill, and divided it with her daughter, Mrs. Lee, in proportion to the interest of each under Mrs. Calhoun's will. In 1871 Mrs. Florida Lee died leaving one child, a daughter, only seventeen days after Mrs. Lee's death. John C. Clemson was killed near Seneca by a R.R. Railroad. The loss of their only two children was a terrible shock to Mr. and Mrs. Clemson. Desolate they mourned the loss of all the brightness out of their lives; but unsearchable are the providences of God, for it was then that these two stricken, sorrowing parents determined to unite in so disposing of all they had left of their property as to bring to their fellow men as much happiness and prosperity as they could have wished for themselves. They agreed to make will to each other, and promised that the survivor would make a will donating all of their joint property to erect an Agricultural College at Fort Hill.

In 1875 Mrs. Clemson died suddenly of heart disease, while Mr. Clemson was absent from home. Many persons in Pendleton remember the grief of this old and now desolate man at the grave when the remains of the devoted partner of his life were being laid to rest.

The remaining years of his life Mr. Clemson spent, desolate and alone, at Fort Hill. After a while he began to take more interest in affairs, and during the time he talked freely of his life and experiences. He portrayed in a manner never to be forgotten the condition the South was sure to be plunged into, if something were not done to arrest the destructive tendencies of the times. Education such as we had before our conditions were changed by the war, was all right, but not enough. To become successful the Southern people had to become practical, and a practical education was necessary to meet the people's necessities.

During the latter part of his life, he talked a great deal about religious matters and became very much concerned about the salvation of his soul. He requested the ministers to visit him. One good man who was with him to the last, said that beyond a doubt he had made his peace with his God, and his last words were in behalf of the poor and suffering. Can the people of South Carolina ever forget Thos. G. Clemson, and the great work he helped to accomplish for them? If it is possible, visit Fort Hill and look around you.

First English Concertina. The first English concertina was made in 1829, but there was a German concertina long before that time. Mozart (who seems to have written for every instrument in existence in his day, including barrel organs, mechanical clockwork, etc.) wrote an adagio in C major 2-4 time for the concertina in the year 1779, and also an adagio and rondo for concertina, flute, oboe, viola, and cello in 1790 or 1791.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years. Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mt. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell.

I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good. I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it. Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlastingly tired feeling?

If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century.

Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. All druggists.
