THE ULSTER SITUATION

The Row Over Home Rule Finds Two Armies Of Civilian Soliders In Protestant Ireland

London, July 10.—With every week of suspense in the settlement of the future government of Ireland the menace of the military preparations by the Ulster and Home Rule volunteers of the south is to accept leadership by the Nationalist party which John Redmond offered them. Thus led there would be a clear division of Home Rulers and anti-Home Rule men into hostile armed camps. The very dangers of a bitter civil war which such a prospect presents, furnishes the best safeguard for peace.

Correspondents of The Associated Press at Dublin and Belfast have written of the situation from the Nationalist and Ulster points of view respectively. The most interesting development is the plan, hitherto unpublished of the Orangemen under Sir Edward Carson for raising a corps of affairs by force if a provisional government is set up and the fact that the commercial men of Belfast have used their influence in Ulster councils to postpone radical action until a Home Rule parliament has been established in Dublin. The great question which confronts the Nationalist volunteers is how far their American sympathizers are likely to come forward with funds for their arms and equipment.

Dublin, July 10.—Estimates of the number of the Irish Nationalist Volunteers vary between 80,000, which is the Dublin Castle figure compiled by the police and a quarter of a million, which is the estimate given in platform speeches. Careful inquiry shows that there are 50,000 in Leinster, which takes the lead, about 45,000 in Ulster (increasing rapidly) 33,000 in Munster and 25,000 in Connaught.

The difficulty of exact estimate arises from the fact that the movement is not organized from the center. Forces have sprung up spontaneously in every parish, and so far are only loosely connected with the provisional central body. There has been a complete wiping out of all class distinctions and the rank and file include every grade—farmers, laborers, shop assistants, clerks, doctors, lawyers, and country gentlemen. There is a very strong leaven of time-expired soldiers—old Connaught Rangers, Dublin Fusiliers and Munster Fusiliers, and their experience is proving useful in the drill.

The chief military commanders are Col. Maurice Moore, who commanded the Connaught Rangers in the Boer War, and Capt. White, a son of the Gen. White, who defended Ladysmith. Recent accessions are Sir Henry Grantan Bellow, a grandson of the great Henry Grantan, who had experience in the fifth Dragon Guards and Capt. Bellingham, brother of the Marchioness of Bute, who is at present an aide-de-camp to the Lord Lieutenant. Military experiences, however slight is at a premium and a medical student with a little volunteer training, is commanding sergeant of a squad which includes among the privates, a university professor of law.

The army has extremely little equipment and almost no money. But the material is excellent and the enthusiasm unbounded. Mr. Redmond's open association with the movement will remove the difficulty of getting money. The man in charge of the movement are for the most part unknown and there has been much reluctance to provide funds till the public knew who would spend the money and for what.

The central body consists of 25 men of these 15 are said to be Home Rulers in sympathy with Mr. Redmond, but the more active, influential and affective spirits are members of the Sinn Fein party. They have few supporters in the country, and the great bulk of the volunteers are supporters of Redmond. Mr. Redmond offered his co-operation to the central body if he was allowed to nominate an equal number of men on it, pending the election of the volunteer branches of a central executive. Failing acceptance he will recommend each county to govern itself.

This offer was rejected on a hastily summoned meeting of the executives who proposed that each county should elect a representative to sit with them. This has produced strong protest from Prof. Kerr who says the meeting was not properly convened and asks for a full meeting when the members would accept Mr. Redmond's offer. Mr. Redmond cannot allow a movement mainly composed of his supporters to be commanded by a self-qualified body, of which the most active members are opponents of his. Once the volunteer members can hold their convention to check an executive the matter will settle itself. Meantime there will be friction which will be obviated to a great extent by making each county govern its own volunteers.

Belfast, July 10.—The leaders of the Covenanters in Ulster profess to consider the Nationalist volunteer movement as something not to be taken seriously. These Nationalist bands in the Ulster counties drill spasmodically and are not connected with any central organization. All the local leaders act entirely on their own initiative. In some districts the volunteers are split up into factions under opposing leaders, who carry on a newspaper warfare.

The Ulster leaders say that the Nationalist volunteers must fall through the impossibility of getting arms. They claim to have many letters from America showing that the Irish there are tired of contributing to Home Rule and now that they consider an Irish parliament assured, they propose to let those in Ireland settle their internal questions without help. If American sympathizers should refill the war chest the present government measures to suppress gun running in all ports would backbite them. "We have two years start in the matter of arming and we mean to keep it," an official of the Ulster Cautious council said to The Associated Press.

In many Ulster villages the Nationalist bands are being drilled by retired army sergeants near the halls and parade grounds of the Ulster battalions and the townspeople are able to watch the preparations of both forces.

There were 2,500 Nationalist volunteers in Belfast about the middle of June and many more in Londonderry city where Catholics and Protestants are much more evenly balanced in numbers. In the Covenanter movement there are two distinct factions at present. One is a militant section which advocates immediate provocative action with the belief that bloodshed would shock the English non-conformists and force Asquith to grant Ulster's demand for permanent exclusion from the Irish government. The other faction which includes important business men fought successfully to prevent the declaration of a provisional government for Ulster when the Home Rule bill passed the third reading in the house of commons. The first faction no clamors to have the provision of government set up when the king signs the bill, while the more conservative business interests counsel daily until the Irish parliament in Dublin is launched. Sir Edward Carson sided with the latter faction at the last conference of leaders here.

Meantime the volunteers, saturated with the military spirit are becoming impatient. Some battalions have even sent deputations of officers to headquarters to ask when the campaign would begin and the work of keeping the bold spirits quiet is increasingly difficult.

The headquarters staff has worked out a plan of campaign for hostilities. It is not likely that they will attempt to use this citizen force against trained regulars with heavy guns, for as one officer remarked, the most they could expect would be to put up one good fight and be cut to pieces. The present plans are to keep the Ulster Nationalists in check when the provisional government is set up.

Most of the Belfast volunteers are being formed into four regiments will act as a police force. A flying column known as Belfast division, composed of 3,500 picked and paid volunteers a majority of whom are old soldiers has been organized as a first line striking force with transport capable of conveying it to any part of Ulster in less than four hours. This force is armed throughout with new Mausers and possesses ten Maxim guns of the latest pattern. Certain county regiments, especially those of Antrim and Armagh, would go on active service with this column, while other county regiments including Londonderry must remain at home to suppress Nationalists.

If the provisional government were established the flying column would be sent to Londonderry where the Nationalists are strongest while the east and west Belfast regiments would form double cordons around the two Nationalist districts of this city, with Maxims covering the principal streets.

Information that the Nationalists are bringing in carboys of vitriol which women would pour on the troops from windows as they pour boiling water during the rioting some years ago has reached Carson's headquarters. "If there is a single act of that kind," said a staff officer, "the building where it is done will be entered, wrecked and every officer killed."

"LITTLE JOE" BROWN Is Said to Have Made a Fatal Mistake This Time.

Atlanta, Ga., July 10.—The press of Georgia continues to express itself on the unwise step made by Joseph M. Brown in offering himself as a candidate against Senator Hoke Smith. It seems to be the opinion of a vast majority of editors that opposition to Senator Smith was a mistake and Mr. Brown's first announcement of his platform—almost wholly a diatribe against labor—has not added to his strength.

The Thomasville Times-Enterprise, say editorially, "The people of Georgia have been remarkably good to Joe Brown. He now claims further elevation and asks for a position, the gift of which would relieve the United States senate of one of its most progressive state-men. Georgia cannot and will not comply with the request. Mr. Brown has the unquestioned right to run out he cannot expect the people to repudiate the services of one of the ablest men in the party to give the office to him."

The Clayton Tribune says: "Senator Smith is in harmony with the administration and it is recognized as one of the ablest men in the senate. The farmer and the common people realize that he is one of their strongest and their truest friends. It is men of his stamp we wish to represent

Rough on the Old Maids. In a quiet English village there was recently held a celebration in the schoolroom at the dedication of a new fire engine. It was a giddy evening, with three speeches by local clergymen and a long-winded oration by a bald-headed politician. The gem of the evening was the following toast: "May she (the fire engine) be like the dear old maids of our village—always ready, but never wanted!"
