FIRST ATTEMPT AT "HECKLING"

Voters at Woodside Mill in Greenville Tried to Howl Down Candidates Last Night

Special to The Intelligencer. Greenville, August 17.—For the first time during the present county campaign, Greenville voters tonight tried to howl down some of the county candidates.

ANDERSON VOTERS TRY TO HECKLE STATE CANDIDATES

An Anti Spoke. W. I. Witherspoon said that he stood for a majority rule of the people. He repeated that he was not a supporter of the administration.

George W. Fairley told of the discrepancy in the freight rates and he advocated better sanitary conditions.

Charles A. Smith, candidate for governor, began speaking at 12:30 o'clock. He spoke of his administration as lieutenant governor.

He said that he was in favor of an economical business administration. He favored a 2 cent flat rate, saying that the railroads can easily afford the reduction.

He said that he wanted a system of public credit by which small farmers may own their homes on long time loans.

Mr. Smith maintained that the lawlessness of which his opponents speak, is largely due to the attitude toward the liquor question.

Mr. Smith maintained that the lawlessness of which his opponents speak, is largely due to the attitude toward the liquor question.

"I am glad to see that 95 per cent of the audience are gentlemen," said Mendel L. Smith as he began his speech and was forced to try to out-talk a number of auditors who quieted down when the speaker further added that there seemed to be many in the audience in need of education.

Mr. Smith went on to explain his stand in favor of local option compulsory education law, an investigation of the state's time deposits and good roads.

He advocated a semi-monthly payment of employees of the railroads in addition to the full crew bill.

Mr. Smith then spoke forcefully of law enforcement and was cheered when he said that he would issue no pardons, paroles or commutations.

In a reply to a heckler, he said, "If I was a candidate for the penitentiary, I would want your vote." He was cheered.

Lowndes J. Browning said that the constitutional school tax of 3 mills should be a state rather than a county levy.

He said "If it is the state's duty to care for the Confederate veterans it is the duty of the state to care for the children."

Mr. Browning exposed the inefficiency and inadequacy of the present personal property tax, saying that he would advocate the abolition of this tax and a substitution in lieu thereof, of a graduated tax of inheritances and incomes.

John G. Clinkscales told several jokes and succeeded in gaining the attention of the audience. He went immediately into an exposition of his plea for compulsory education.

He said that he was after the man whose patriotism went no further than the end of his own life.

He then said that he wanted every child between the ages of seven and twelve years to attend school three months in each year.

He compared education to the first flight of an eagle that had been caged for many years. He was applauded and was given two bouquets and a basket of grapes.

Robert A. Cooper was applauded as he arose and said that he joined Dr. Clinkscales in the arraignment of South Carolina for the neglect of her children, but said that it was on account of a lack of school facilities.

"I do not hesitate to say," he said, "if the people do not take advantage of their educational opportunities, when provision has been made, they should be made to do so by the State."

Mr. Cooper then told of his advocacy of a farm demonstration school under the direction of Clemson college in each county. He repeated his stand on enforcement of law.

He said that his office, if elected governor, would be just as open to those who voted against him as to those who had voted for him.

John T. Duncan discussed his system. "Whenever," he said, "I lay hold of Bleese's coat tail, it will hold for the purpose of kicking the seat of his pants," and the audience cheered.

William C. Irby, Jr., saying that he had heard in Abbeville, that Mr. Richards was denying that in Spartanburg he had refused to disclose his vote in the race of 1913, produced an affidavit from W. S. Rogers, Jr., member of the house from Spartanburg county, and six others. These men swear that they heard John G. Richards refuse to tell how he voted in 1913 and say in addition, "that that was a sacred right and no power under heaven could make him tell."

Mr. Irby stated that his telegram to Spartanburg had been misunderstood and that he had had the impression corrected. Mr. Irby got the affidavit in order to protect himself as he had made the positive statement of the Union meeting that Mr. Richards had refused to tell.

The speaker also attacked the immigration bureau and the cotton mill merger.

Richard I. Manning announced he had received word from the low country that if he was equally well supported in the Piedmont section, he would be elected governor.

My Fellow citizens, what is the use of discussing laws that ought to be enacted. There are laws that should be enacted but are the laws now or the statute books enforced?

The senatorial campaign has overshadowed the state campaign. I cannot overstate or exaggerate the importance of the state campaign.

I am opposed to factionalism. But this race for governor has narrowed down to the question whether we are to continue the policies of the present administration, with all its lawlessness or whether we are to put an end to the condition which is disgrace to the State.

I have been called the apostle of hate in South Carolina for no other reason than that I have tried to point out the true situation and apply the remedy. In pointing out the conditions of things I have done no more than a physician in diagnosing a case—that is, to seek the cause before giving the medicine.

There are those in South Carolina of opposite political faith than I who believed that the election of certain men to office in this State would benefit conditions. There are thousands upon thousands of them in their honest conviction that they were doing the right thing in casting their ballot for the men of their choice.

I ask those men now who have stood by the administration whether their hopes have been realized. Have we a better condition than before?

I do not come here to abuse any man. My sole purpose is to point out just where South Carolina finds herself at this time and help you to apply the remedy. Undoubtedly, as you all know, there has been reckless abuse of the pardoning power. What is the meaning of 900 negroes pardoned and paroled and 300 whites? A spirit of lawlessness, hitherto unknown in the state prevails at this time.

There is only one solution and that is to elect a man as Governor who will enforce the laws without fear or favor and who will use the pardoning power with care and discretion.
