MARKET REPORT

New York Cotton.

NEW YORK, March 17.—There was another sharp advance in cotton at the opening today with July and later deliveries making new high seasonal records, but reactions followed under realizing, and the close was steady at a net gain of only 1 to 5 points.

Continued strength of Liverpool was a factor at the start and first prices were 9 to 11 points higher with July selling at 9.32, compared with 9.28, high record of last January.

Liverpool was a buyer here, while there was covering by some of yesterday's sellers for a turn, and a considerable demand from Wall Street and western sources. Offerings, however, included some southern selling, while there was also moderate selling here by houses with German connections and prices soon reacted to within 5 to 6 points of yesterday's closing.

Business became less active after Liverpool's close and the market turned easier in late trading, closing at the lowest point of the day.

Private cables attributed the advance in Liverpool to continued French and Russian buying, larger spot sales, and small steady.

Cotton futures closed steady:
