LOCAL VETERANS IN BUSINESS MEETING

CAMP STEPHEN D. LEE HAS CHOSEN STATE AND NATIONAL DELEGATES

GENERAL ORDER

With Reference to Richmond Reunion is Received—Other Matters

An interesting business session of Camp Stephen D. Lee, No. 753 U. C. V., was held yesterday in the court house.

Among the matters transacted was the election of delegates to the State reunion, which will be held in Columbia, April 22-23. The following delegates were chosen: H. H. Gray, John Thompson, J. N. Byrum. The alternates are: J. L. McCauley, Joe Eskew, Miles Pickens. Delegates to the United Confederate veterans reunion, which will be held in Richmond, June 3-5 were elected, as follows: W. W. Russell, W. C. Brock, E. J. Henderson. The alternates are: D. H. Russell, A. H. Osborne, John R. Cochran, Sr.

The following resolution, presented by Col. J. C. Stripling of Pendleton, was unanimously adopted by the camp:

Whereas the remains of General Barnard E. Bee, who gave General Jackson the name of Stonewall Jackson, rest in the cemetery at the Episcopal church at Pendleton, S. C., and where a monument for General Stonewall Jackson will be unveiled at the Richmond reunion;

Be it resolved that this assemblage of Confederate veterans respectfully request all chapters of United Daughters of Anderson to join with the Barnard E. Bee chapter, U. D. C., of Pendleton, S. C., in contributing for a suitable wreath at the monument unveiling in honor of General Bee.

The Richmond reunion was discussed at length, and a resolution was adopted calling on all comrades who expect to attend to notify Adjutant L. P. Smith by May 1st. Col. Joseph N. Brown, commander of the camp, who presided over the meeting today, read the following letter received from the reunion entertainment committee, Richmond, which furnishes much information about the reunion and which will be read with interest by the veterans generally:

My Dear Comrades: The United Confederate veterans reunion will be held in Richmond June 3 to 5, inclusive, and it is the desire of the local committee to make the reunion one of the grandest that was ever held since its organization. We want every ex-Confederate in this land to attend. We believe that many of our comrades are not in a financial condition to attend. The general committee, therefore, wants to assist them after their arrival in Richmond, so that they will be in a position to attend the reunion.

We request all camps to fill in the enclosed blanks with name and regiment of such members as are not in a position to stand the expense of hotel and quarters, and on their arrival in Richmond they will be assigned to their quarters. All veterans who will accept quarters of local committee will bring blankets. Not only members of your camp, but all ex-Confederates of your city and county who desire to attend.

We will extend to them the best hospital care of old Virginia. Adjutants of the camps will kindly give the names of all ex-Confederates that will attend, and register the names on the enclosed blank and return to these headquarters not later than the first of May, as the committee wants to make proper assignments for them.

Sincerely your comrade,
D. A. BROWN, JR.,
Chairman, Reunion Entertainment Committee, 507 E. Main St., Richmond, Va.

Story Written By Eugene Walters, Author of "Paid in Full"

When Jules Beauvieux's father died, the young man found himself left to the stout old mansion at Montreal and a big fortune which the family had made in the lumber of the great Canadian forests. But on his death bed his father had made a confession that 20 years ago he had met a squaw of the Ojibway tribe and that a girl child was born. She was now up in the Nipissing country with a ranch Canadian family that had adopted her by arrangement with the father. Old Beauvieux's last words to his son exacted a promise that the boy would find his half sister, educate and care for her and give her a liberal share of the estate. As soon as affairs could be settled up Jules started on his quest to find Annette. Arriving in the Nipissing country he found that the family had moved from the valley, but he was informed that a woods man, Baptiste Le Grande, could tell him all about the girl, as he had loved her sweetheart. He had loved the girl with all the strength of his rough manhood, but a city man had come along and betrayed her. Baptiste tried to tell the story, but his voice would not permit him to be coherent and Father Paul continued. "He told Jules that the seducer had abandoned the girl and gone back to America. Annette knowing she was discarded ran away from her foster parents and wandered to the camps where the women of the trappers tried to care for her, she became delirious but she never mentioned the man's name. When her child was born she wandered out into a storm and with her babe in her arms laid down in the snow and died, and the wolves had eaten her and the child. The rage of Jules and Baptiste was terrible. They joined hands and swore to find this man and kill him. Baptiste took a crucifix from his bosom, both men kissed the symbol and for two years the quest of vengeance continued. In the Indian summer Jules and Baptiste put up at MacTavish's house. Two other men arrived, Mr. McDonald, a civil engineer and his assistant, Mr. Huntley, who were surveying for a Canadian railroad. McDonald was a splendid specimen of physical manhood about 40 years of age and very entertaining. His ability at his profession had made him rich and with all he was a man of courage and likeable. MacTavish's daughter, Hilda, a strong and beautiful girl of Swedish type, did the cooking and housekeeping and it was not surprising that McDonald and Jules soon noticed that each were contesting for the smiles of the Scotchman's daughter and Hilda was not averse to the pleasantries of the good looking boarders for her life was far from being a happy one, her mother not being able to stand the irascible MacTavish had run away when Hilda was a child and the father had vented his revenge and hatred upon the daughter. Soon the rivalry between Jules and McDonald became an open book. Jules loved Hilda while the other man was simply playing for a dishonorable advantage. One day the men admitted their rivalry face to face. Jules was willing to play the game fair, but demanded of McDonald if his intentions were honest. The rone laughed in the other man's face, admitted that he had a wife in America, but boasted of his power over women. In his bravado he told of an affair some years ago with a little half-breed girl up in the Nipissing country. It was the story of Annette. Jules should have killed him on the spot, but one impulse prevented, he was a man of honor, he could not assassinate, he must fight this fiend, man to man, and it would be before the day had spent. Then he must also tell Baptiste who would also want to kill him, which he would if Jules fell in the fight. McDonald, feeling that he was losing ground with Hilda, planned to work her ruin through her father. He told MacTavish that he had a good mother in America that would care for and educate Hilda, and that then he would marry her. The old Scotchman was only too willing to get rid of the girl and demanded of her that she would go with McDonald. Jules had told Hilda of the good love and the bad love and she had found that the engineer's love was a passion, and she had learned to love Jules. When MacTavish ordered her to go with McDonald she resisted. The old man in his rage would have seized her by the throat and strangled her, but Jules bore him to the floor of the cabin, while Baptiste from outside the window covered McDonald with his Winchester. The fight was desperate and long, but Jules seized Hilda, and with Baptiste and Huntley who had discovered his master's villainy. The four hastened to the creek and in a canoe which had been furnished with supplies for the trip, made towards the Canadian railway for Montreal. McDonald followed and Jules left the party at a landing to meet him. A desperate duel was fought in which McDonald was killed and Jules and his party, after burying the body, hastened to his home and happiness.

COW SUCGUMBS TO DREAD "BLACK LEG"

CASE WHICH CROPPED OUT THURSDAY DID ITS WORK QUICKLY

BODY BURNED

According to Federal Laws Governing Certain Matters—Precautions Taken

Sometime between 9 and 12 o'clock Friday night the cow belonging to E. H. Ballentine, 220 Bower street, which developed a genuine case of symptomatic anthrax, better known as "black leg" or "the evil" disease, succumbed to the dread malady. Yesterday Dr. J. C. Mitchell, who diagnosed the case and who attended the cow, gave The Intelligencer a history of the case. About 2 o'clock last Thursday afternoon the cow suddenly developed lameness in the left rear leg. Upon examination by the owner, no evidence of an injury to the leg was shown. Dr. Mitchell was called in about 6 o'clock that afternoon. He found the cow with high temperature and discovered several though not all of the symptoms of the "black leg" disease.

Friday morning a well developed case of the dread disease had shown up, characterized by severe puffing up of the skin and muscles of the leg. The cow was given a double dose of "anthrax vaccine," but grew steadily worse. The affected parts continued to swell and the cow continued to grow weaker, being unable to rise from the ground.

Yesterday morning arrangements were made by Health Officer Campbell, Dr. John Major, meat, milk and food inspectors, and Dr. Mitchell to dispose of the carcass under the federal laws governing such matters. The carcass was taken beyond the city limits, where it was placed in a pit and cremated. In the meantime the health officer proceeded to completely disinfect the entire premises where the cow died. Dr. Major established a quarantine in the neighborhood, so as to prevent cows being moved from one place to another. He also took the necessary precautions about the milk supply of that vicinity.

As to whether there will be other cases like this, remains to be seen. Dr. Mitchell stated that it would take a week for cases to develop, and in the meantime a close watchout will be maintained and if other cases show up the matter will be handled with the utmost dispatch. This disease is highly fatal, the mortality amounting to about 95 per cent among animals which are afflicted with it. The cow was a valuable one, Mr. Ballentine buying it last December for $40.
