ELECTRIC CITY SPARKLETS

Items of Interest and Personal Mention Caught Over the Wireless on the Streets of Anderson

Establishes Premium Department Here.
Jack Mullan of the Liggett & Myers Tobacco company has secured for Anderson a premium department of this big firm, which is to be placed at Evans Pharmacy No. 1. There are only four of these premium departments in the State. The display of premiums is so attractive that the window dresser of Evans Pharmacy has decided to enter this window in the window dressing contest which is to be held today under the auspices of the club.

Repaired Broken Window in Jiffy.
While the window dresser of Evans Pharmacy No. 2 was trimming the window of this store late yesterday afternoon, preparatory to entering the window dressing contest of the Anderson Ad Club, which is to be held today, he fell against the large plate glass, or rather let some object fall against it, and smashed the big pane. It was thought at the time that the chances for this store entering the window dressing contest were all up, but that conclusion was reached before the management of the store had conferred with Manager Keith Prevoost of Townsend's Lumber Mills, who handles plate glass windows, as well as a whole lot of other supplies. Mr. Prevoost was called in for a consultation, with the result that in 30 minutes he had a brand new plate glass in place in the store front. Shortly thereafter, Mr. Theo. Fant announced that his store would be in the window dressing contest after all.

Old Anderson Boy Back After Years.
Mack Strader, who made his home in this city some 16 years or more ago, is back in town for the first time in some seven years. His father, the late G. H. Strader, who resided in Greenville at the time of his death, was connected with the Orr Cotton Mills at the time the family lived here. Since leaving here Mack Strader has been almost everywhere. He served two and a half years in the United States navy as a wireless operator, being assigned to some of the largest and newest dreadnaughts and super-dreadnaughts of the navy. On account of falling eyesight he was retired from active duty on a pension. From the navy he went with the government, as inspector of electrical machinery, with headquarters at the Westinghouse plant in Pittsburgh. He was amazed upon reaching Anderson to note the growth of the town in the past seven years.

Head of Division of Salvation Army.
Brigadier and Mrs. Crawford, South Atlantic Divisional Officers of the Salvation Army, will be in Anderson next Monday, according to an announcement yesterday by Esaua Belcher of the local post. The brigadier will address the young people at St. John's Methodist church next Monday evening. In the afternoon it is planned to have him conduct an open air service on the public square. This will be the annual visit of these officers to the local station.

Mrs. M. Lesser Has Been Very Ill.
Friends throughout the city of Mrs. M. Lesser will be pleased to hear that she is recovering from a rather severe illness. Mrs. Lesser, who resides on East River street, is one of the oldest residents of the city.

Sup't. Swearingen Will Be Here Soon.
Information was received in the city yesterday that State Superintendent of Education J. E. Swearingen will be here to make an address at the closing exercises of the city schools on May 24. He will spend the remainder of the week in the county, visiting some of the rural schools. Superintendent Felton stated yesterday that he would be pleased to hear from those schools which desired to have Mr. Swearingen at that time.

Plans For Bee Memorial Changed.
The meeting of ladies of the county scheduled to be held yesterday noon at the chamber of commerce for the purpose of considering plans for a memorial to Gen. Bernard E. Bee, was called off. It was decided to turn the matter over to the Pendleton district, U. D. C.

Railroad Commissioners Will Be Here Today.
The members of the State Railroad Commission will arrive in Anderson today from Augusta on an inspection of the roadbed of the Anderson branch of the Charleston & Western Carolina Railway. The commissioners left Columbia yesterday afternoon for Augusta, and will leave the latter city this morning for Anderson on a special train. They are expected to reach here about 2 o'clock this afternoon. It is thought that the commissioners will be here but a short while, returning to McCormick, where they will inspect the roadbed of the C. & W. C. between that point and Greenville.

German Socialist Who Fights Militarism

KARL LIEBKNECHT.
Karl Liebknecht's fight against German militarism in the Reichstag has brought on him the attention of the world. His defiance of the government in December when the Kaiser demanded popular support in financing the war brought him into violent conflict not only with the German militarists, but with socialists of his own party.

"It might appear, then, that Liebknecht takes the position of the Socialists of France and Belgium—that this is a war against German militarism. But this is not the case. He repudiates that view and attributes the war to the desire of capitalists of all great nations for new markets and fields of investment. Moreover, he favors immediate peace, which would undoubtedly mean a return to the status quo, which existed before the war, another point on which the Socialists of France and Belgium would not agree with him.

"He declared that Germany for many years has been the accomplice of militarism and the model of political backwardness; that the war was in no sense a war of defense, but was actually fostered by Germany and American war parties in the darkness of semi-absolutism and secret diplomacy in order to steal a march on the adversary."

"The importance of the stand taken by Liebknecht and the German Socialists that support him lies in their readiness to enter into an immediate life and death struggle with the German ruling class, taking full advantage of the critical moment."

BUTTER CHEMIST FOR CLEMSON CREAMERY

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE HAS DETAILED EXPERT FOR THIS WORK

BUTTER MAKER

Has Also Been Detailed For the Creamery And Several More Field Men.

It was learned yesterday morning from a visitor from Clemson College that the United States Department of Agriculture, had detailed a special butter chemist who will be stationed for all of his time at the Clemson College to work out several chemical problems in connection with southern butter.

In addition to this expert, it was stated, an expert butter maker has also been detailed for service at the Clemson College creamery. The department has also decided to add some four or five men to the field force, that is, those men who traverse this section of the State establishing creamery routes and looking after the details in connection with the carrying on of the work.

The Clemson College creamery is now turning some 2,000 pounds of butter a week, and, according to the visitor, the creamery has been unable to supply the demand which has come from the northern markets for this butter.

The creamery business at Clemson has grown by leaps and bounds. The work was started several months ago with one field man. Now there are four or five field men, and plans are announced for practically doubling the force.

It is understood that those who have charge of this creamery work are very anxious to establish a creamery route extending out from Clemson College and passing down through the Wild Hog section of the county, along Eighteen Mile Creek.

How to Buy Phosphoric Acid.

In buying phosphoric acid the percent available is the important matter. In guaranteeing the phosphoric acid that is guaranteed as soluble in water, citrate soluble, and reverted may be assumed to be available. Most Southern soils are deficient in phosphoric acid. The application of some material containing available phosphoric acid will, therefore, usually pay, but on some soils it will not and for that reason every farmer should do something towards finding out the needs of his soils by making tests to a limited extent at least.

This plant food is also used in all parts of the crop, but is more largely needed for the production of seeds or fruit. Lands which make a good growth of wood or stalk, which fall to fruit properly may respond profitably to the use of phosphoric acid.

Acid phosphate is probably the best source of phosphorus for the average Southern farmer. It contains from 1 to 16 per cent of phosphoric acid and the higher the grade the cheaper per pound of plant food as a general rule.

The phosphoric acid in basic slag or Thomas phosphate is less readily available than in acid phosphate, but costs less per pound. The phosphoric acid in ground phosphate rock or floats is still cheaper, per pound, and still less readily available. Because of its cheapness, however, it is the best source of phosphorus when mixed with stable manure or when applied to lands rich in decaying vegetable matter or humus. There is little such land in the South and plowing under one crop of cowpeas or other crop will not reduce suitable conditions for the use of ground phosphate rock on most Southern soils. Phosphoric acid usually costs four cents to five cents a pound in acid phosphate and mixed fertilizers, and one cent to a cent and a quarter a pound in ground phosphate rock.—The Progressive Farmer.
