The BLACK BO

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Author of "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo," "The Vanished Mess-enger," "The Lighted Way," etc.

ded from the motion picture drams of the same name produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. Fills at rated with photographs from the motion picture production

SYNOPSIS,

In her apartment at the Leland Ella, daughter of Lord Ashleigh, is murdered and the Ashleigh diamond necklace stolen. The New York police place the case in the hands of Sanford Quest, known and feared as the master criminologist of the world. He takes Lenora, Ella's maid, to his own apartments and through hypnotism and the use of electro-telepathic appliances discovers her connection with the crime. cliances discovers her connection with the rime, recovers the diamonds and arrests he murderer. Macdougal, Lenora's hus-and, though nearly trapped to his death a a tough tenement house while engaged the work.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

"THE HIDDEN HANDS."

CHAPTER VI.

Sanford Quest and Lenora stood side by side upon the steps of the courthouse, waiting for the automobile, which had become momentarily entangled in a string of vehicles. A little crowd of people were elbowing their way out on to the sidewalk. The faces of most of them were still shadowed by the three hours of tense drams from which they had just emerged. Quest, who had lit a cigar, watched them curiously.

"No need to go into court," he remarked. "I could have told you, from the look of these people, that Mac-doughl had escaped the death sentence. They have paid their money—or rather their time, and they bave been cheated of the one supreme thrill." "Imprisonment for life seems terrible enough," Lenora whispered, shud-"Can't see the sense of keeping such a man alive myself," Quest declared, with purposeful brutality. "It was a cruel murder, fiendishly committed." They were on the point of crossing the payement toward the automobile when Quest felt a touch upon his shoulder. He turned and found Lord Ashleigh standing by his side. Quest glanced towards Lenora.

"Run and get in the car," he waispered. "I will be there in a moment." "I would not have stopped you just now, Mr. Quest," said Lord Achleigh. "but my brother is very anxious to renew his acquaintance with you. I think you mel years ago."

Sanford Quest held out his hand to the man who had been standing a little in the background. Lord Ashleigh turned towards him.

"This is Mr. Quest, Edgar. You may remember my brother-Professor Ashleigh—as a man of science, Quest? He has just returned from South Ameri-

The two shook hands, curiously diverse in type, in expression, in all the appurtenances of manhood.

"I am very proud to make your acquaintance again, professor," Quest sald. "Giad to know, too, that you hadn't forgotten me."

"My dear sir," the professor declared, as he released the other's hand with seeming reluctance, "I have thought about you many times. Your doings have always been of interest

"I am sorry," Quest remarked, "that our first meeting here should be un-der such distressing circumstances!" The professor nodded gravely.

"If you'll excuse me, professor," said Quest, "I think I must be getting along: i, i trust.

"One moment," the professor begged, eagerly. "Tell me, Mr. Quest—I want your honest opinion. What do you think of my ape?"

"Of your what?" Quest inquired "Of my anthropold age which I have just sent to the museum. You know my claim? But perhaps you would pre fer to postpone your final decision until after you have examined the skele A light broke in upon the criminol

"Of course!" he exclaimed. the moment, professor, I couldn't fol-low you. You are talking about the skeleton of the ape which you brought home from South America, and which you have presented to the museum

"Naturally," the professor assented, with mild surprise. "To what clear I am stating my case Mr. Quest, in the North american Review next month; I manually you, however, as a fellow sciential, the great and obsolute truth, My claim is incontestible. My assistor w/n prove to the world, without a doub, the absolute truth of Derwin's geant theory.

"That so?

"You must go and see it," the professor insisted. "You chall be permitted a special examination."

"Very kind of you," Quest murpose. aturally," the professor ass

"We shall meet again soon, I hope,"
the professor concluded cordially,
"Good morning, Mr. Quest!"
The two mee shook hands and Quest ok his seat by Lenora's side in the homobile. The professor rejoined low York . The Englishman glat

(Copyright, 1918, by Otta F. Wood.) around him, as they passed up the drive, with an expression of disapproval.

"A more untidy looking place than yours, Edgar, I never saw," he declared. Your grounds have become a jungle. Don't you keep any gardeners?"

"I keep other things," he said zerene ly. "There is something in my garden which would terrify your nice Scotch gardeners into fits if they found their way here to do a little tidying up. Come into the library and I'll give you one of my choice cigars. Here's Craig waiting to let us in. Any news,

"Nothing has happened, sir," he replied. "The telephone is ringing in the study now, though."

"I will answer it myself," the professor declared, bustling off.

The professor took up the receiver from the telephone. His "Hello!" was mild and inquiring. He had no doubt that the call was from some admiring disciple. The change in his face as he listened, however, was amazing.

"George," he gasped, "the greatest tragedy in the world has happened! My ape is stolen!" His brother looked at him blankly.

"Your ape is stolen?" he repeated. "The skeleton of my anthropoid ape," the professor continued, his voice growing alike in sudness and firmness. 'It is the curator of the museum who is speaking. They have just opened the box. It has lain for two days in an antercom. It is empty!" Lord Ashleigh muttered some-thing a little vague. The theft of a skeleton scarcely appeared to his unscientific mind to be a realizable thing. The professor turned back to the telephone

"Mr. Francis," he said, "I cannot talk to you. I can say nothing. I shall come to you at once. I am on the point of starting. Your news has overwhelmed me."

He laid down the receiver. He locked around him like a man in a nightmare. "The taxleab is waiting, sir," Craig reminded him.

"That is most fortunate," the proor pronounced. "I remember now that I had no change with which to pay him. I must go back. Look after my brother. And, Craig, telephone at once to Mr. Sanford Quest. Ask him to meet me at the museum in twenty minutes. Tell him that noth-ing must stand in the way. Do you

The taxicab man drove off, glad enough to have a return fare. In about half an hour's time the professor strode up the steps of the museum and hurried into the office. There was a little crowd of officials there, whom the curator at once dismissed. He rose slowly to his feet. His manner was grave and bewildered. "Professor," he said, "we will waste no time in words. Look here!"

He threw open the door of an anteroom behind his office. The apart-ment was unfurnished except for one or two chairs. In the middle of the nicarpeted floor was a long woo

Measuring the Fostprinte.

Pried.

"Yesterday, as you know from my note," the curator proceeded, "I was away. I gave orders that your case should be placed here that I myest about enjoy the distinction or opening it. An hour ago I commenced the task. That is what I found."

The professar gazed blanking at the empty box.

"Nothing left around the

e empty box.
"Nothing left except the smell," a cice from the open decryay remarked.

They glanced around. Quest was standing there, and behind him Lenors. The professor welcomed them

This is Mr. Quest, the great orin inologist," he explained to the curator. Quest strolled thoughtfully around the room, glancing out of each of the windows in turn. He kept close to the wall, and when he had finished he drew out a magnifying glass from his pocket and made a brief examination of the box. Then he asked a few questions of the curator, pointed out one of the windows to Lenora and whispered a few directions to her. She at once produced what seemed to be a foot rule from the bag which she was carrying, and hurried into the garden.

"A little invention of my own for measuring footprints," Quest ex-plained, "Not much use here, I am afraid."

Quest stood over the box for a moment or two and looked once more out of the window. Presently Le-nora returned. She carried in her hand a small object, which she brought silently to Quest. He glanced at it in perplexity. The professor peered over his shoulder.

"It is the little finger!" he cried-"the little finger of my ape!" Quest held it away from him criti-

"From which hand?" he asked.

"The right hand." Quest examined the fastenings of he window before which he paused during his previous examination. He turned away with a shrug of the shoulders.

"See you later, Mr. Ashleigh," he concluded laconically.

A newstoy thrust a paper at them. Quest glanced at the headlines. Lenora clutched at his arm. Together they read it in great black type:

ESCAPZ OF CONVICTED PRIS-

Macdougal, on His Way to Prison, Grappies With Sheriff and Jumps From Train! Still at Large, Though Searched For by Posse of Police.

CHAPTER VIL

The windows of Mrs. Rheinholdt's town house were ablaze with light. A crimson drugget stretched down the steps to the curbstone. A long row of automobiles stood vaiting. Through the wide-flung door was visthis a pleasant impression of flowers and light and luxury. In the nearer of the two large reception rooms Mrs. Rheinholdt herself, a woman dark, handsome and in the prime of life, was standing to receive her guests. By her side was her son, whose twen-ty-first birthday was being celebrated.

"I wonder whether that professor of yours will come?" she remarked, as the stream of incoming guests slackened for a moment.

"He hates receptions," the boy replied, "but he promised he'd come. I never thought, when he used to drill science into us at the lectures, that he was going to be a tremendous big

Mrs. Rheinholdt's plump finger toyed for a moment complacently with the diamonds which hung from her neck. "You can never tell in a world like this," she murmured.

"Here he is, mother!" the young man exclaimed suddenly. "Good old boy! I thought he'd keep his word."

Mrs. Rheinheldt assumed her most ncouraging and condescending smile as she held out both hands to the pro-

"It is perfectly sweet of you, prossor," Mrs. Rheinholdt declared.

Mrs. Rheinholdt breathed a sigh of elief as she greated her new arrivals. The professor made himself universally agreeable in a mild way, and his presence created even more than the sensation which Mrs. Rheinholdt had hoped for. In her desire to show him ample honor she seldom left his

"I am going to take you into my husband's study," she suggested, later on in the evening. "He has some spe-"Bestles," the professor declared, with some excitement, "occupied pre-cisely two months of my time while abroad. By all means, Mrs. Rhein-holdt!" "We shall have to go quite to the back of the house," she explained, as she led him along the darkened pas-

The professor smiled acquiescently. His eyes rested for a moment upon her necklace.

"You must really permit me, Mrs. Rheinholdt," he azclaimed, "to admire your wonderful stones. I am a judge of diamonds, and those three or four in the center are, I should judge, protein."

unique.

She held them out to him. The profess of laid the end of the neck-lace gently is the paim of his hand and examined them through a horo-rimmed eyegtass.

"They are wonderful," he murmured, "wonderful! Why—"

He turned away a little abrurtly. They had reached the back of the horse and a door from outside had just sain opened. A man had crossed the threshold with a cost over his arm and was standing now looking at "How extraordinary!" the professor emarked. "Is that you, Craig?" "Yas, sir," he replied. "There is a sinutorm, so I ventured to bring your tacking to be.

intoch."

fery thoughtful," the professor mured approving T have a kness," he went on, turning to his less, "for always walking home or an evening like this. In the dayto I am content to ride. At night I, to the feary siways to walk."
We don't walk half enough," Mrs. sinholic sighed, glancing down at somewhat portly figure. "Dixon," added, turning to the footman who.

"Stolen!" Mrs. Rheinholdt Shrieked.

had admitted Craig, "take Professor Achleigh's servant into the kitchen and see that he has something before be leaves for home. Now, professor, if you will come this way."

They reached a little room in the far corner of the house. Mrs. Rheinholdt apologized as she switched on the electric lights.

"It is a queer little place to bring you to," she sald, "but my husband used to spend many hours here, and he would never allow anything to be moved. You see, the specimens are in these cases."

The professor nodded. His general attitude toward the forthcoming exhibition was merely one of politeness. As the first case opened, however, his manner completely changed. Without taking the slightest further notice of his hostess, he adjusted a pair of horn rimmed spectacles and commenced to mumble eagerly to himself. Mrs. Rheinholdt, who did not understand a word, strolled around the apartment, yawned and finally interrupted a little stream of eulogies, not a word of which she understood, concerning a green beetle with yellow spots.

"I am so glad you are interested, professor," she said. "If you don't mind, I will rajoic my guests. You will find a shorter way back if you keep along the passage straight ahead and come through the conservatory." "Certainly! With pleasure!" the professor agreed, without glancing up. Mrs. Rheinholdes reception, notithstanding the temporary absence of its presiding spirit, was without doubt an unqualified success. In one of the distant rooms the younger peo-ple were dancing. Philip Rheinholdt, with a pretty young debutante upon his arm, came out from the dancing room and looked around amougst the little knots of people.

"I wonder where mother is?" he re marked. "She told me—"

The young man broke off in the middle of his sentence. He, too, like many others in the room, felt a sudden thrill almost of horror at the sound which rang without warning upon their ears—a woman's cry, a cry of fear and horror. Mrs. Rheinholdt, her hands clasping her neck, her splendid composure a thing of the past, a panic-stricken, terrified woman, stumbled into the room. She the seemed on the point of collapse Somehow or other, they got her into an easy chair.

"My jewels!" she cried. "My dia-

"What do you mean, mother?" Phil-lip Rheinholdt asked quickly. "Have you lost them?"

"Stolen!" Mrs. Rheinholdt shrieked "Stolen there in the conservatory!" They gazed at her open-mouthed, in credulous. Then a still, quiet voice from the cutaide of the little circle Intervened.

"Instruct your servants, Mr. Rheinholdt, to lock and bar all the doors of the house." the professor suggested. "No one must leave it ur'll we have heard your mother's story."

"I had just taken the professor into the little mom my husband used to call the museum," Mr. Rheinholdt explained, her voice atill shaking with agitation. "I left him there to examine some specimens of beatles. I thought that I would come back thringh the conservatory, which in the quickest way. I was about half way across it when suddenly I heard the switch go behind me and all the electric lights were turned out. I electric lights were turned out. I couldn't imagine what had happened. While I hesitated I saw—"

The broke down again. There was no doubt about the gonulacters of her terror.

"I saw a pair of hands—just hands—no arms—nothing but hands—come out of the Carkness! They gripped me by the throat, I suppose it was just for a second. I think—I lost consciousness for a mousent, although I was still standing up. The next thing I remember is that I found myself shricking and running here—and the jewels are gone!"

"You saw no one?" her son saked incredulously. "You heard nothing?"
"I heard no footsteps, I saw no one." hirs, Rheinholdt repeated. The professor turned owny.

or turned away. "It you will allow me," he begged "I am going to telephone to my friend. Mr. Sanford Quese, the criminologist "Stolen There in the Conservatory!" An affair so unusual as this might attract him. You will excuse mc."

The professor met the great criminologist and his assistant in the hall upon their arrival. He took the former at once by the arm.

"Mr. Quest," he began, "in a sense I must apologize for my peremptory message. I am well aware that an ordinary ewel robbery does not interest you, but in this case the circumes are extraordinary. I ventured, ore, to summon your aid."
So ford Quest nodded shortly.

"As a rule," he said, "I do not care to take up one affair until I have a clean slate. There's your skeleton still bothering me, professor. How-ever, where's the lady who was

"I will take you to her," the professor replied.

Mrs. Rheinholdt's story, by frequent repetition, had become a little more coherent, a trifle more circumstantial, the perfection of simplicity and uttorly incomprehensible. Quest listened to it without remark and finally made his way to the conservatory. He requested Mrs. Rheinholdt to walk with him through the door by which she had entered and stop at the precise spot where the assault 2nd been made upon her. There were one or two plants knocked down from the tiers on the right-hand side, and some disturbance in the mold where some large palms were growing. Quest and Le-nora together made a close investigation of the spot. Afterwards, Quest walked several times to each of the doors leading into the gardens.

"There are four entrances alto-gether," he remarked, as he lit a cigar and glanced around the place. lead into the gardens—one is locked and the other isn't—one connects with the back of the house—the one through which you came, Mrs. Rheinholdt, and the other leads into your reception room, into which you passed after the assault. I shall now be glad if you will permit me to examine the garder outside for a few minutes, alone with my assistant, if you please."

For almost a guarter of an hour Quest and Lenora disappeared. They all looked eagerly at the criminologist on his return.

"It seems to me," he remarked, "that from the back part of the house the quickest way to reach Mayton avenue would be through this conservatory and out of that door. This is a path leading from just outside straight to a gate in the wall. Does anyone that you know of use this means of exit?

Mrs. Rheinholdt shook her head. "The servants might occasionally," she remarked doubtfully, "but not on nighte when I am receiving." T's butler stepped forward. He was looking a little grave. "I ought, perhaps, to inform you, madam, and Mr. Quest," he said, "that to the professor's servant—the man who brought your mackintosh, sir," he added, turning to the professor—"that he could, if he chose, make use of this means of leaving the house. Mr. Craig is a personal friend of mine, and a member of a very select little club we "Did he follow your suggestion?" Sanford Quest asked. "Of that I am not aware, sir," the butter replied. "I left Mr. Craig with some refreshment, expecting that he would remain until my return, but a few minutes later I discovered that he had left. I will inquire in the kitchen have for social purposes."

He hurried off. Quest turned to the

if anything is known as to his move

"Has he been with you long, this man Craig, professor?" he asked.

The professor's smile was illuminating, his manner simple but convincing.

"Craig." he asserted, "is the best servant, the clost honest mortal who ever breathed. He would go any dis-tance out of his way to avoid harming a fly. I cannot even trust him to pro-cure for me the simplest specimens of insect life. Apart from this, he is a man of some property, which he has no idea what to do with. He is, I think I may say, too devoted to me to dream of ever leaving my service.

"You think it would be out of the question, then," Quest asked, "to associate him with the crime?"

The professor's confidence was sublime

"I could more readily associate you, myself or young Mr. Rheinholdt here with the affair," he declared.

His words carried weight. The little breath of suspicion against the professor's servant faded away. In a moment or two the butler returned.

"It appears, madam," he announced, "that Mr. Craig left when there was only one person in the kitchen. He said good-night and closed the door behind him. It is impossible to say, therefore, by which exit he left the house, but personally I am convinced that, knowing of the reception here tonight, he would not think of using the conservatory."

"Most unlikely, I should say," the professor murmured. "Craig is a very shy man. He is at all times at your disposal. Mr. Quest, if you should desire to question him."

Quest nodded absently.
"My assistant and I," he announced, "would be glad to make a further ex-amination of the conservatory, if you will kindly leave us aione."

They obeyed without demur. Quest took a seat and smoked calmly, with his eyes fixed upon the roof. Lenora went back to her examination of the overturned plants, the mold and the whole ground within the immediate environs of the assault. She abandoned the search at last, however, and came back to Quest's side. He threw away his cigar and rose.
"Nothing there?" he asked laconically.

"Not a thing," Lenora admitted. Quest led the way toward the door. "Lenora," he decided, "we : 9 up against something big. There's a new hand at work somewhere." "No theories yet, Mr. Quest?" she asked, smiling. "Not the ghost of one," he admitted gloomily.

Along the rain-swept causeway of Eayton avenue, keeping close to the shelter of the house, his mackintosh turned up to his ears, his hands buried in his pockets, a man walked swiftly along. At every block he hesitated and looked around him. His manner was cautious, almost furtive. Once the glare of an electric light fell upon his face, a face pallid with fear, almost hopeless with despair. He walked quickly, yet he seemed to have no 'iea as to direction. Suddenly he patr.d. He was passing a great building, brilliantly lit. For a moment he thought that it was some place of entertainment. The thought of entering seemed to occur to him. Then he felt a firm touch upon his arm, a man in uniform spoke to him.

"Step inside, brother," he invited carnestly, almost eagerly, notwith standing his monotonous meal twang. "Step inside and find poace. Step in-side and the Lord will help you. Throw your burden away on the threshold."

The man's first impulse at being addressed had seemed to be one of terror. Then he recognized the uniform and hesitated. The man took him by the arm and led him in. There were the best part of a hundred people taking their places after the singing of the hymn. A girl was standing up before them on a platform. She was com-mencing to speak, but suddenly broke off. She held out her arms to where the professor's confidential servant stood hesitating.

"Come and tell us your sins," she alled out. "Come and have them for iven. Come and start a new life in new world. There is no one here to thinks of the past. Come and seek at the American Revolution. Tickets on sale April 15, 16 and 17th with return limit April 24th. called out. "Come and have them forgiven. Come and start a new life in

"Confess Your Sins."

of an infinite desire flashed in his eyes. Then he dropped his head. These things might be for others. For him there was no hope. He shook his head to the girl, but sank into the nearest seat and on to his knees.

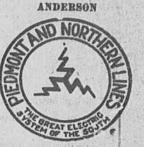

"He repents!" the girl called out Some day he will come! Brothers and slaters, we will pray for him."

The rain dashed against the win-dows. The only other sound from out-side was the clanging of the street The girl's voice, frenzied, exhorting, almost hysterical, pealed out to the roof. At every pause the little gathering of nien and women grouned in sympathy. The man's frame was shaken with sobs.

CTO BE CONTINUED.

Condensed Passenger Schedule PIEDMONT & NORTHERN RAILWAY

Effective January 17th, 1915.

8:25 a. m No. 43. . . . . . . . . . 9:20 p. m. Departures.

Charleston & Western Carolina Railway

Traffic Manager.

To and From the NORTH, SOUTH. EAST, WEST

Leaves: No. 22 . . . 6:08 A. M. No. 6 . . . . 3:37 P. M. Arrives:

No. 21 . . . 11:15 A. M. No. 5 . . . . 3:07 P. M. Information, Schedules. rates, etc., promptly given.

E. WILLIAMS, G. P. A., Augusta, Ga. T. B. CURTIS, C. A., Anderson, S. C.

Greatly Reduced Round Trip Tickets yla yla

Southern Railway

tist Convention. Tickets on sale May 6th to 11th, with return limit May 31st, 1915.

limit April 24th.

who thinks of the past. Come and seek forgiveness."

For a moment the waif from the rain-swept world hesitated. The light to 30th, with return limit May 4th,

For complete information, Pallman reservation, and tickets call on any agent, or write to, W. M. M'GEE, A. G. P. A. Columbia, S. C. W. R. TABER, T. P. A., Greenville, S. C.

CHARLESTON-CHICAGO SLEEPER Through Puliman Sleeping Car Service

SOUTHERN BAILWAY Premier Carrier of the South Effective Sunday, November 22 1914. Sleeper handled on Sincetive Sunday, November 22nd, 1914. Sleeper handled on CABOLINA SPECIAL Nos. 27 and 28.

Schedule

S a. m. Lv. Charleston Av. 5:40 p. m. 12:55 p. m. Lv Columbia Av. 4:45 p. m. 4:30 p. m. Lv Spartanhurg Av. 1:45 pm. 7:20 p. m. Lv Spartanhurg Av. 1:45 pm. 12:05 a. m. Lv Knoxville Lv 5:10 n. m. 10:55 a. m. Av. Cincinnati Lv 6:75 a. m. 9:00 p. m. Av. Cincinnati Lv 6:75 a. m. Passengers from Anderson and Greenville territory will make connections by leaving av. trains Nos. 15 to Greenville and 12 to Spartanhurg and connecting there with the Chicago. Drawing Room Sleeper to Chicago. Drawing Room Sleeper, Standard Pullman Skeeper, Dining car and through coach.

For full and complete informatical tickets and pullman reservation call on any ticket agent, or write W. E. Taber, T. P. A., Greenville, S. C., or W. E. Medes, A. G. P. A., Celombia, S. C.

Should Not Feel Discouraged.
So many people troubled with indigestion and constipation have been benefited by taking Chamberlain's Tablets that no one should feel discouraged who has not given them a trial. They contain no people or other discative ferments but strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its turchless putarally. Obtainable everywhere. Should Not Feel Discouraged.