

Just at this time of year most of us feel like sitting under the shade and letting some of the things that need attention go undone, but pretty soon if we were to give way to our feelings we would regret having been so "lazy." There is much fruit and vegetables that need saving and it means now or never, hot or cold, rain or shine.

We have on hand a good supply of fruit jars, fruit jar rings for Mason jars, White Crown jar tops, rubbers, Economy jar tops, preserving powder, pure apple vinegar and white wine pickling vinegar; fly traps to catch the flies; kraut or meat jars; churns; pitchers for butter, milk, etc; covered jars, jugs, etc.

But Don't Work All the Time

You need some rest. If your chairs need a new bottom call on us for most any size. If you think of taking a vacation you will probably need trot lines, fish lines, fish hooks, etc. Maybe a cheap water proof drinking cup. We have them.

Cots, cot pads, single iron beds, mattresses and springs for same. School baskets for the children.

Tone up your horse, after a hard summer's work, with one of our Medicated Salt Bricks. Harness oil for the old dry harness. Buggy and wagon paint. Furniture paint, paint brushes, etc.

Come to see us.

THAT TALL, DARK MAN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON.

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Don met them at the train — Lorraine, her mother and father. It seemed centuries since he had seen her, Lorraine, of course, although it had been but two weeks since she had gone away.

The parting had been full of foreboding for Don. Such a trip was sure to be prolific in young men. To make things more ominous, Lorraine had intimated before leaving that Signorina Lotta had foretold tantalizingly vague things of a tall young man with brown eyes and dark hair. This was thorns and nettles to Don, whose eyes were gray and hair a decided auburn.

He now searched her face anxiously. Had the dark young man materialized in the fortnight's vacation? There was nothing there to tell. Lorraine was as sweet and smiling—and baffling—as ever. He sighed.

He was asked to stay to dinner and accepted gratefully. He had a dogged determination not to leave until he had verified, or dissipated, his fears. Two things favored him—the moon and the arrival of the preacher. The back yard swing soon had two occupants.

Lorraine suddenly became talkative. "The whole thing was heavenly, Don. From the minute we left until just now."

"Thank!"
"You're welcome, grouchy! I'd think you'd be glad to see me back. Instead you've been glooming around like a funeral. Well, I'm going to tell you all about it anyway. I've just got to tell someone. Do you remember about Signorina Lotta—all she said about a dark man and everything?"

"No!" killing a mosquito. "What did she say? Surely you don't believe the rot a fortune teller gets off?"

"Oh, but I do. It all came true; almost every word of it. You see, it was this way," gazing rapturously at the moon. "When we got to Baltimore the city was all decorated for the big centennial. After we had seen the decorations and all that had wanted to go on a battleship."

"Well, where does the fellow come in?"

"Sh! I'm coming to that! We went across the bay to a great whopping man-of-war that made you feel all glorious and patriotic—"

"But when—"
"Be quiet! I'm coming to him soon. They let us on that one. We went up a funny little pair of stairs they lowered over the side of the boat."

"But what has your brown-eyed friend to do with—"

"For goodness sake, be quiet, Don. You're worse than Prince barking for a bone. Well, mother and I were looking all around everywhere. Dad had wandered off by himself, and in a few minutes he came back with the tallest, handsomest, darlingest, brown-eyed—"

Don coughed painfully behind his hand.

"Poor boy! What a cold! Well, as I was saying, dad came back with the tallest, hand—"

"I heard you the first time."

"Oh, did you? Well, he was. And he treated us just lovely. He took us lots of places other people weren't allowed to go, for he was an officer. His uniform was gr-r-a-a-n-d."

Silence.

"And then that night we went by boat to Old Point Comfort and Norfolk. We were at luncheon in the hotel when who should walk in but Lieutenant Erickson. He took us through the fort and everywhere—"

"Yes, I know. I've been there! Then I suppose he went back to Annapolis where he belonged!"

"Who? Oh, indeed he didn't! Dad and mother and I got on the boat that night and went to Boston."

"Well—that's all, I suppose."

"No, indeed! The best—very innocently—is yet to come."

"Heavens! I suppose he suddenly developed a pair of wings and—"

"Why, Don, you act so funny! I don't understand you at all."

"Humph! Well, go on about your brown-eyed god of Olympus. What next?"

"Why, that very day we were coming out of a shop on Tremont street in Boston, when whom should we run into but—"

"Lieut. Jupiter von Erickson, I suppose!"

"Yes," wonderingly. "How did you guess? And his wife!"

"His wife! His wife, did you say?"

"M-hum! And she was as beautiful as he was handsome! Her hair was a beautiful light—"

But what her hair was like Don never heard. "You little tease!" he cried, holding her tight to his breast.

"Tell me what color of eyes you like best, before I let you go."

"Gray!" confessed Lorraine softly.

"State Use System" Favored.

Governor Fielder of New Jersey favors the establishment of the state use system by which convicts may be employed. Under this plan goods used by the various state departments will be manufactured. The various correctional and prison reform boards urge the removal of the state prison from Trenton to Rahway and the placing of 250 convicts on road repair work and 200 on the prison farm in Cumberland.

Better Salary Figure, Too

The valued Pickens Sentinel needn't waste any sympathy on us because Col. Billie Burke has abandoned the legitimate for the movies, as we expect her to show just as good form there.—Columbia State.

Congressman Aiken's Goat

Congressman Aiken has bought a victrola and a goat. Canned music and a can consumer.—Columbia Record. Jokes about getting his goat are now in order.—Anderson Intelligencer. His goat may get somebody else.—Abbeville Press and Banner.

Printers and Editors

Ben Franklin in his latter days, when the world hailed him as a great and wise man, was proud to sign himself, "Benj. Franklin, Printer." Printers today make more money than newspaper writers. And that is as it should be, for three months' training will make a tolerably good editor or newspaper writer out of any educated, intelligent man, while it requires four years to finish a decent printer, though he start his apprenticeship with an Oxford degree.—Fountain Inn Tribune.

A "Free" Gospel

Salvation is free, but the converted sinners of Paterson, N. J., made up a purse of $25,000 for Billy Sunday.—Anderson Mail. Of course it's free, but some one must pay the freight.—Pickens Sentinel.

You've no doubt heard of the old man who got very happy at a camp-meeting and while "shouting" showed his gratitude by hollering out, "Thank God for a free gospel. I've belonged to the church for twenty years, and it's never cost me a cent." That is some folks' idea of free salvation.—Newberry Observer.

Overland 5-Passenger Touring Car, Model 83

$750 f. o. b. TOLEDO $750

35 horsepower motor High-tension magneto ignition. Electric starting and lighting. Left-hand drive, center control. Tires, 33 by 4 inches, non-skid in rear. Demountable rims (one extra rim). Full streamline body. Deep divan upholstery.

This is the Largest Four-Cylinder Overland That Will Be Produced This Year.

THE long, low streamline body is unmarred by angles or projections. From the rounded edge of the radiator to the full curved back, there is not a break in the lines. The hood slopes gently upward and blends into the beautifully curved cowl. The doors are flush, with hinges concealed and handles inside. The fenders are long and sweeping in their curves, with gracefully rounded surfaces. The running boards are clean and free from obstructions, the storage battery concealed, the fire carriers placed at the rear. The windshield is built-in, and conforms to the curve of the cowl—a part of the car itself, not an apparent afterthought. The car is superbly finished in a rich, deep Brewster green, delicately striped with pure ivory white, and set off in pleasing contrast by black enameled radiator, fenders and running board shield.

Model 83 touring car is a beautiful car. It asks no odds of any car at any price—it is at home in any company.
