AN INSUFFICIENT TRIBUTE

An account of the death of Mr. John B. Blanton, which occurred in Forest City, N. C., July 8th, would hardly be of very great interest to The Sentinel readers, since few if any of them knew him. However, Mr. Blanton held such a warm place in the heart of The Sentinel editor that we beg our readers to allow us a few words about him. He was a grandfather of Mrs. Gary Hiott of Pickens and was eighty-four years old.

When a young man he entered the Confederate army and served throughout the Civil war, being severely wounded at the battle of Gettysburg. Returning from the war to his native country he found that his health was so shattered that he was unable to work for more than a few months. Undaunted, though, he entered the mercantile business, which was successful. Then he was elected Mayor of Forest City in 1870. He was a man of great energy and a great deal of business ability. He was a man of great energy and a great deal of business ability. He was a man of great energy and a great deal of business ability.

I mention these facts because of the interest of the war. He was a man of great energy and a great deal of business ability. He was a man of great energy and a great deal of business ability. He was a man of great energy and a great deal of business ability. He was a man of great energy and a great deal of business ability.

Most people claim the shape of the church is round. Nothing claims its shape is flat. But from a certain N. C. comes the opinion that this is a bell-shaped shape. Optimism is a strong part of White Hills. You about the way that seems to be flat at the top, but is in fact and well-shaped of course.

We dreamed a dream the other night. Dreamed we went to heaven. Good old Sam Taylor let us in. We heard around for some spiritual P. M. and they seemed to be about fifty of them. We saw Sam Taylor in a white robe and a white beard. He was a man of great energy and a great deal of business ability. He was a man of great energy and a great deal of business ability.
