Young men, see notice in another col umn of competitive examinations for appointment to scholarships in the college of Charleston.

A meeting of the board of City School trustees will be held to-day to consider the action of the State board of examiners in changing the school books. It is estimated that the change will involve the expenditure of $2000 to the children in this city and it is probable that the board will remonstrate.

It was reported here yesterday that a white man named Jenkins was dangerously shot by a negro at a negro association near Fountain Inn, Sunday. The negro was arrested and carried to Greenville. It is said that there was great disor er at the association during the day and that quantities of peach brandy were sold and drunk.

A game of baseball was played be tween the Laurens team and a nine of travelling female players Friday. The city council exacted a license of $50 and so prevented the game from occurring within the city limits. It was played just outside of town. The boys won the game without exerting themselves by a score of 10 to 7. A large crowd was present including many people from the country. The ADVERTISER believes that the action of the city council in the matter was proper.

For the Sufferers. The following are the contributions made in this city for the Beaufort sufforers:

Cash contributions, white and colored citizens, $71.65; King's Daughters' entertainment, $34; Knights of Pythias $25; contributions in food and clothing, valued at $300. Total, $430.65.

The amount which has so far been contributed for the sufferers is nothing in proportion to what is needed to make them comfortable. It is therefore to be hoped that our people will continue to send in contributions so far as possible.

Miss Rose Melville. Miss Rose Melville.

Miss Rose Molville, the soubrette with the "Zeb" Co., which plays at the Opera House next Tuesday evening, is one of the cleverest soubrettes of the day, and of all the funny character parts that were ever introduced on the stage, Miss Melville deserves great credit for being the originator of the funniest. She plays a part in the last act called "Sis Hopkins" and it is entirely a new characterization to the stage, and she actually gets more laughs in five minutes than some comedians get in a whole evening. Besides the new character, Miss Melville introduces several catchy singing and dancing specialties, and wears some stunning costumes.

A Backset for the State Grog Shop. Senator A. C. Fuller has received a let er from Governor Tillman from which his extract is taken:

"If your statements are true, which I do not doubt, the county board of Laurens has transcended their authority and we will not recognize their action as legal. Your questions in regard to the legal status of the newly enfranchised citizens is one for the courts to pass on. The illegality of the action of the county board areas from not having the patitive board arose from not having the petition on file the ten days required by law." It may therefore he sately said that a dispensary will not be established in Laurens for the present at least. It will be observed that in another column the county board of control is called to meet Sept. 14th inst.

The ADVERTISER has been inforced that the one eighth of an acre deeded to the fitty nine or sixty persons in order to make them freehold voters really contains something like 200 square feet. If it were partitioned each of the sixty would own less than four square feet. The land is said to have about the shape of a buggy whip. It is some four feet broad at one end and perhaps a hundred yards long and tapers down to an invisible point. That is what a gentleman who is familiar with the land says of it.

World's Fair.

World's Fair.

We have had saw mills, railroads, tanks, fire engines, horses and many other effects introduced on the stage, but Harry Hardy, manager of "Zeb," has introduced an entirely new effect, and one that is filling theatres nightly. One scene represents the movable side walks, one of the novel features of the World's Fair. To properly place this effect on the stage, the company carry 16280 feet of special scenery. This effect is new, novel and original with the Zeb Company, and if one draws on his imagination he can see a reproduction of the World's Fair buildings, and perhaps recall a pleasant visit. This company will play at the Opera House here next Tuesday evening, the 18th inst.

Notice of Meeting.

Board of Control for Laurens County will meet in office of R. C. Watts, Esq., on September 14th, 1893, at 10 o'clock, a m., to consider Petition for Dispensary, H. E. GRAY, Chairman.

School Entertainment.

The inclemency of the weather prevented the closing exercises of Owings Academy from taking place at the time appointed. They will take place Thursday, September 14th, commencing at 10 o'clock. The exercises of the day will consist of addresses by prominent speakers, and an entertainment given by the pupils, with a lawn party at night. Everybody is invited to attend.

of Miss Mary Grier as Musical Direcress. The program consisted of music, tableaux, and recitations, and reflected much credit upon all concerned. The opening tableau, the Pyramid of Beauty, was participated in by the small people of the town and went off remarkably well especially as with most of the "tots" it was a first appearance. All the mamas concerned had a right to feel quite proud both of the appearance and behavior of their darlings. The foremost figure in the picture was Cupid armed with his bow and aiming at the most elevated and tiniest girl of the lot. Music was next in order and Miss Harris and Miss McCaslan rendered a vocal duet with much sweetness and power. The tableaux, Flirtation, In Love, Marriage, and Vexation followed and were all particularly deserving of mention. In the first scene, Miss Ida Fuller and Billy Ball, both appeared to take kindly to their role. In the next, Love, Dorroh Forguson was reveated, placing a diamond, which undoubtedly bore the stamp of Tiffany, upon the finger of Miss Lydie Irby. Scene number three was Married-the honey-moon too presumably, in which Miss Mary Garrett and Claude Garrett participated. Tableau the fourth was Vexation in which Miss Nan McCaslan and C. W. Garrett posed very successfully as the injured young wife and sardonic husband. From time Koppel) as the program styled them, delighted the audience with a succossion of songs, many of them comic, and all good to listen to in every way. The Tableau of the evening was Esther before King Ahasuerus, in which Miss Frierson appeared in the character of the Jewish Maiden and Dr. H. K. Aiken as the Eastern Potentate. It is needless to say that with so much natural grace and beauty Miss Frierson could of the great attractions of the occasion was the recitations of Miss Garrett.

"Home to our Mountains" a vo cal duet by Mrs. Aiken and Miss Mc-Caslan and "Tell Me With Your Eyes," vocal solo by Miss McCastan, were the most enjoyable features of the affair in a musical way. Mrs. Atken has a rich contralto which harmonizes well with Miss McCaslan's fine soprano. To menion with commendation all those who deserved it and to do justice to the realy beautiful effects attained to would be task that space and time would not allow of. Hampton Guardian. Thusday morning was bright and beautiful, in happy contrast to the week of drizzling, depressing ones that had preceeded it, and the early sun shone preceded it, and the early sun shone down on our sparkling streets filled with the good citizens of Hampton, dressed in holiday attire, and joylully wending their way to the Baptist church o witness the marriage and subsequent departure of one of Hampton's fairest daughters.

The church was tastefully decorated and rare exotic with evergreens and rare exotics, while in front of the altar a beautiful floral horseshoe was suspended, and pendent from it a silvered letter "R" peeped from the flower envelope

By 7 o'clock the seats were all comfortably filled and the hum and buzz of an expectant audience rose above the noise of hurrying foosteps. Suddenly a hush fell on the unusual assemblage and silence reigned until broken by the deep, rosonant notes of the artistically played organ, and the edifice vibrated with the musical melody of the wedding march. The bridal party had arrived and was the cynosure of all eyes. The lovely bride appeared supported by the groom leaning on the arm of his brother. The bridal party met at the altar, where Rev. John G. Williams stood ready to utter the words that made two loving hearts happy and linked two souls together for their journey through life.

Never did the handsome Miss Leonora Mauldin look imore bewitchingly beautiful, or more self-possessed, than she did standing there in the house of the Lord, on the threshold of another life, attired in travelling costume and roady to bid addieu to the scenes of her childhood and to the friends of her youth. She is the second daughter of Major W. H. Mauldin, and an acknowledged favorite of Hampton, her graces of person being equalled only by those of her head and heart. Highly educated, refined, and imbued with all the characteristics of true womanhood, she will grace any position that her husband's abilities may win. The numerous and costly wording presonts are indicative of her popularity with the good people of Hampton.

The groom, Rev. L. M. Roper, is a rising young Baptist minister, who has a large and very important charge at Attica, N. Y. While here just previous to his marriage, he delivered several very eloquent sermons in the Baptist church, and our people had an opportunity of judging of his ability, his energy and his devotion to the cause of his Master.

Scarcely had the accomplished organist, Mrs. McIver Bostick, finished the last notes of the Wedding March when the Rev. Mr. Williams began the impressive marriage ceremony, the father gave the bride away, the eventful words were spoken, well selecte Its flowery envelope.

Some were strolling, many were pic nicking under the trees, hundreds were lolling on the grass and here and there was a group playing cards. In a sense there seemed to be a contemptuous disregard of the Sabbath just as if the knowledge that it is set apart and made sacred had not found its way to those remote but populous regions. One who has even a dim recollection of the Shorter Catichism is at first shocked at the scene but as his eyes grow familiar with it the conviction forces itself that there is deep rest and recreation pervading it all. Face to face with these people enjoying their Sunday as school children sport in their midday recess many of us at this distance too willing to condemn them as hardered sinners and desecrators of the Sabbath gladly recall and obey the Scriptural behest which forbids us to judge lest we be judged ourselves. While our party, there were thirteen of us, were being driven over the park in a "park phieton" the driver suddenly drew rein in front of old Abe Lincoln's statue. Then with amiable condescension and in the Chicagoese language he informed us that his grand father was a Darnell and a cousin of the statue's original. He was a white baired world have the statue's original. and in the Chicagoese language he haired youth with a red face, was

Monday morning after my arrival in Chicago I embarked in a bus and rode down to the World's Fair. It is generally and vera-clously advertised as the greatest show on earth, The characteristic of it that impresses you, oppresses you, knocks you down and strikes you dumb is bigness. The moment after you enter the gates you are stranded. Perhaps you have a portable library of guide books and eight or ten reams of maps and charts which you have been diligently studying for weeks but you are lost, dazed and confounded just as you would be should you land in the moon. There are a thousand courses open to you. You can for a dime take a trip over the intramural railway, an elevated road running around the grounds but "within the walls" as the name implies, and it will afford you an excellent view of the way the trees appear to the sparrows sweeps, You will land in the re-gion of perplexity again. you have received more lasting impressions than you will obtain in the week that follows. It is all new and grand now and the dazzling pictures sink into your mind to abide. For the time you are satisfled that every exhibit is obediently registering itself in your memory and that you will be able to deal out graphic descriptions by the yard to your friends at home. But the two hours are over and you begin to appreciate the bigness of the World's Fair. It has suddenly fallen upon you like a feather bed from some tall height above. Its weight sinks into you, down, down and settles in your feet and ankles. There it stays. Your whole body is soaked with fatigue, but the mighty weight is all below the knees. Thenceforward you cease to walk but crawl without getting on all fours. Novelties and marvels continue to paint themselves on the crowded retinas and the mind has a hazy consciousness that the pro-cesses are going on. But the intoxicating joy of sight-seeing is over. Wonders have ceased. You are now "doing" the fair. You have a fixed purpose to wander After going to Church on a Sunday morning and listening to a Texan deliver a most excellent and eloquent sermon I journeyed out to Lincoln Park and spent the afternoon.
