

By Sir Walter Scott. Breathes there a man with soul so dead...

A Father's Powers.

President Cleveland, in appointing a Chief Justice of the United States...

Youth's Companion.

This occurrence illustrated the difference between the usage of our own and almost every other constitutional country.

Neither of those functionaries would venture to appoint even the magistrate of an inferior court without the consent of the minister of state.

The case of the nomination of the Chief Justice is only an incident in the exercise of the American President's power.

The President then makes his decision upon each bill. Such acts as he does not approve he "vetoes."

With us, then, what is virtually the final fate of every measure adopted by a House chosen by universal suffrage lies in the hands of a functionary elected at one remove from the people.

The President of France is, in fact, chiefly a figure-head, or at the most a balance-wheel, for the nation, performing much the same function as the monarch of a purely constitutional country like England or Italy.

It would not do, however, to assume, because the President of the United States possesses so much greater powers than the President of the French Republic, that the United States is a more despotic country than France.

Many of the institutions of that country are monarchical in origin and in spirit. The central government arrogates to itself powers which in this country are exercised by states, counties, cities, towns.

Though the personal power of the French President is small, the authority of the central government itself is much more extended, and much more despotically used, than that of the United States.

Half-a-dozen churches in New York bear upon their spires or weather-vanes the figure of a cock, though doubtless without any intent on the part of the builders to preserve an ancient superstition.

Remember, ladies, said the Manayunk philosopher, "a man is like an egg. If you keep him in hot water he is bound to become hardened."

Magnetic Nerve, the great restorative, will cause you to sleep like a child.

A Father's Wise Counsel.

We do not know of a better compendium of rules for the government of a young man's conduct in the practical affairs of life than is found in a letter written by Robert E. Lee to his son who had left home to attend college.

It is a sublime sermon against moral cowardice by one in whom "frankness" was "the child of bravery and courage."

We give the letter in full as a code, worthy of adoption by all young men.

You must study to be frank with the world; frankness is the child of bravery and courage.

It is not only best as a matter of principle, but it is the path to peace and honor.

In regard to duty, let me, in conclusion of this hasty letter, inform you that nearly a hundred years ago there was a day of remarkable gloom and darkness, still known as 'the dark day,' a day when the light of the sun was slowly extinguished, as if by an eclipse.

There was quietness in that man's mind, the quietness of heavenly vision, and inflexible willingness to obey present duty.

Never let me or your mother wear one gray hair for any lack of duty on your part.

At a club dinner in Brooklyn, Dr. Jerome Walker related this incident regarding Abraham Lincoln.

Dr. Walker said, in substance: "One week before his assassination Mr. Lincoln visited the hospital at City Point, where I was stationed as a member of the United States Sanitary Commission."

My Lincoln, do you want to go into all these tents? We had gone into all the others. He said, in his quiet way: "Why not?" I replied: "There are only rebels in there."

God liked Eve so much better than Adam that there have been more women than men ever since.

Boys are a trouble. They wear out everything but soap.

My papa is so nice that I think he must have been a little girl when he was a little boy.

The question has often been asked why the army cadets at West Point wear a gray uniform, while the uniform of the army is blue.

Remember, ladies, said the Manayunk philosopher, "a man is like an egg. If you keep him in hot water he is bound to become hardened."

GETTING READY TO DIE

In an idle hour Mrs. Donaldson picked up a patent medicine advertisement on her coat and read it with a voluinous list of leading questions.

When Judge Buchanan was holding Court in Charleston he signed injunctions against a number of men who were charged with selling liquor in violation of the law.

When the attic was finally in order, the entire house was gone over with equal care. The "unseen rooms" were treated to various surprises.

Look as she would she couldn't see a good stock hanging anywhere. Her heart was very sorely tried.

Gettin' ready to die had made her a well woman.

The Columbia correspondent of the Atlanta Constitution has the following reference to the profits of the dispensary.

The actual facts are that at the end of Commissioner Minton's first quarter, ending April 30th, the total profits made up to that time were $100,287.48.

The Columbia correspondent of the News and Courier has the following comments upon the Bowen case:

The idea here is that Bowen ought to have gone to Sumter and made his defence and respect to Judge Buchanan, who has to give credit to the man who believes to be right in the matter.

In conjunction with the announcement of the use of the dispensary bludgeon it is announced that Judge Simonton will not have occasion to have any of the constables up before him for alleged violations of his injunction.

It is announced that Mr. C. S. Blasiol, of Charleston, was expected to represent Bowen, Assistant Attorney General Townsend said that he did not wish to have any snap judgment taken and that Judge Bowen waited all day before signing the order.

It is announced that Judge Bowen waited all day before signing the order, and that it was expected that a telegram or some sort of explanation of the absence would be received.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

ABSOLUTELY PURE. The Columbia correspondent of the Atlanta Constitution writes as follows: "The dispensary officials are in high glee at the sentencing of W. J. Bowen."
