Druggist—Yes, ma'm, in a few minutes I will have it ready. The Druggist busies himself for a short while, then takes the lady to the Soda Fountain, gallantly offering a refreshing drink. The lady customer accepts the said invitation. The list of drinks ready to be dispensed is called over, and Lemon Phosphate chosen. After the lady is served the busy druggist attends to the wants of the other customers.

The lady customer, after waiting some time, reminds the druggist of the Castor Oil. With a bland smile he replies: "You have already taken it; I put it in the glass of Soda Water." "Oh my! my!!", said the young lady. "I wanted the Oil for my mother."

OUR CAMPAIGN DAY.

The Campaigners were all on hand at an early hour Saturday morning and the public square had a stirring, ively air, many of the stalwart demo erats greeting the Senatorial aspirants about the Ben-Della and the offices of Sheriff and Clerk in the Court House. The candidates were kept ousy shaking hands, making new and enewing old acquaintance. A stand had been prepared by the Executive Committee, but the morning being damp and indicating rain and the candidates complaining of worn-out voices, Chairman Smith concluded to hold the meeting in the Court House and at 11:30 the gates swung wide open and in a few minutes the great Court Hall was packed full of the noble stalwart democrats of "old" Laurens .-Chairman Smith invited Rev. Mr. Adams to invoke the divine blessing after which with appropriate words he introduced State Senator and candidate Mayfield, who was warmly greeted. He is a tall six footer, apparently thirty years old, of line phy ique and face and after graceful alluions to Laurens plunged into his theme, discussing the tariff and its intricacies and the Dispensary institution in this State. We have not space to give his argument, but he made a most schsible speech, and got a good share of applause. Whether he wins in this encounter or not he promises to be heard of in South Carolina. Ex-Governor Evans was then introduced. With appropriate preliminary, complimentary of his surrounding n "grand old Laurens," he took off his gloves and proceeded at once to hammer away at his target, Hon. Curly Headed Johny McLaurin, knocking out the feathers and making the wool fly. Of course we can't reproduce his argument on the tariff, which was full, able and elaborate. Evans made a most capital speech. He spoke for more than an hour and a half, all along punctured with rattling applause, the audience in capital humor and giving admirable attention. There was some little disposition towards ugliness from an occasional McLaurin man but the speaker was always equal to the speciasion and having the reply shot got away with his customer with applause. Col. Irby, our home candidate, was then introduced and had a great ovation, and that he was a favorite in the audience of six hundred was beyond dispute. He alluded to his home raisng, his patriotic ancestry long identi led with our county, his services to hi state, the Democracy, irrespective of action and after a satisfactory expla nation of the loan made him by a New York Senator, said that so much time was consumed, he would not make an argument. In a spirit of hospitality to his epponent Mr. McLaurin who was to come last, he yielded the speaker's stand, getting a genuine full-throated round of shouts as he took his seat. Then Curly-Headed Johny was presented. The audience now was grow ng tired, but the stout son of the East nad many friends in the throng and he met a good healthy cheering. As his record had been punctured from head to heels by Mayfield and Evans,
