

THE TRANSFORMED BURGLAR.

BY HOWARD FIELDING.

The very excellent woman who was cook in my father's household was afflicted with a serious impairment of vision in the last years of her service.

She had been in the habit of taking a pinch of salt and it over a roast of meat with the mistaken notion that she was cropping a little here and there.

Then she would suddenly open her hand and all the salt would fall in one place. It is thus that blind fate seasons our lives with the condiment of fortune.

This philosophical reflection is suggested by the recent remarkable experience of a young friend of mine. She is a charming girl, blond, petite and graceful.

She had been to the theater with her friends and had had a bit of supper and was home again a little after midnight.

Facing about she saw the dark figure of a man by the door. The form was barely distinguishable in the gloom.

Edith tried to scream, but her voice wouldn't seem to come. She would not have been so frightened if she had seen a man in a suit.

There was just light enough for her to see a shining object in the hand that was outstretched toward her.

Edith was brave; most people are who have been guarded from alarms during their youth.

She stepped aside with him and he was saying to her friend, "I will keep this until you can get your things."

Edith kept still. It seemed to her that he had never been so still before. The house was like a tomb, and the whole city outside was listening and forgot to murmur.

I must think, I must think," she said, "I must think, I must think."

"I must think, I must think," she said, "I must think, I must think."

"I must think, I must think," she said, "I must think, I must think."

"I must think, I must think," she said, "I must think, I must think."

QUESTION OF APPOINTMENT.

Extreme Republicans Want to Cut Down Representation to Actual Vote Cast.

Mr. Wm. E. Curtis, the most noted newspaper editor in Washington, in discussing the reapportionment in Congress, writes as follows:

The fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States provides that representatives in Congress shall be apportioned among the States according to their respective numbers.

Our People Should Move Right Along and Keep in the Middle of the Road.

Let us move right straight along and keep in the middle of the road. All is not lost save honor, nor will the North dare to cut down our representation in Congress.
