Between the Enoree and the Saluda is the real seat of Parnassus and the muses have not strayed far and we hope to hear of their doing their duty more faithfully at an early day. Please read as follows and send for a copy of the "Interlude":

ORIGIN OF CHARLESTON PHOSPITATES. It was in the remote depths of antiquity, in the time of Noah and in the Ark, after it had rained ten days and nights of the forty ordained. Mrs. Noah, who was an ambitious woman, said to her husband:

Noah, dear, I do not like the idea of being shut up forty days and nights with these small common, Eastern animals, nor of peopling the earth with such; nor do I find much comfort in the kinship and companionship of my sons' wives: for really, between you and me Noah, they are rather common women Now, Noah, dear, remember that you have a long line of illustrious anceshave a long line of illustrious ancestors—that you are the grandson of Methuselah and the great-grandson of Enoch, who went to Heaven without dying. And remember, too, that I am both a D. A. R. and a Colonial Dame. Therefore, let us steam away to the other side of the seas, to the ancient City of Charleston, where, according to the opinion of your great-grandfather, Enoch, was the original Garden of Eden. There let us take on board the Megatherium and the Ichthyosaurus, those great animals which weigh from seven to ten tons, so that we may have worthy and fitting com-weigh from seven to ten tons, so that we may have worthy and fitting com-panionship."

Noah answered: "You are right, my dear; we will steam on the mor-

They steamed, and towards the close of the second ten days they arrived of the Battery, and invited two very fine specimens of Megatherium and two very fine specimens of the lehthyosau-rus to enter the Ark. But, lo! when they came to the door of the Ark, which, you remember, was in the side, they could not enter for their enor mous size. The Ark was only about fifty-five feet high, while the smaller Megatnerium stood one hundred and five feet.

Mrs. Noah was in despair, but she was a club woman, and, like Miss Sally Brass, of whom an ancient author, named Dickens, had written, "a woman of resolute bearing." So she said:

said: "Steer the Ark into Church street "Steer the Ark into Church street and turn its gable end to the sidewaik, as is the fashion there: then we will take out the entire gable, so that the Megatherii and the Ichthyosauri may

Mrs. Noah was a learned woman and spoke good Latin, but this project (Mrs. Noah also spoke French) was an utter failure. The Megatherii and the lehthyosauri still towered high above the extreme point of the gable.

The male Megatherium trumpeted loudly and immediately there flocked around him, filling not only all the streets of the ancient city, but also all the country for twenty miles around, countless thousands of Megatherii and Ichthyosauri. The male Megatherium addressed them thus:

addressed them thus:

'Alas! alas! our days are numbered. The water is already up to our shoulders, and there are still twenty days and nights of rain before us. This so-called great Ark is but an Indian dugout. Our fate is sealed: we sha'l sleep sixteen furlongs beneath the earth, and in intura years, when this provides and in future years. in future years, when this proud and beloved old city shall be giving a great Exposition that will attract and astonish all the known world, our exhumed, pulverized and ammoniated bones will be exhibited as guano—or in more po-lite parlance, "Commercial Fertilizer" —Coosaw, Wando, Etiwan, Edisto— blood, bones, phosphates and bi-carbo-nate of soda!
