FAMOUS OUTFITTERS FOR MEN WO-MEN AND CHILDREN.

Our reporter called at Davis, Roper & Co.' store and found Col. Dyer as usual "up to his eyes" in work—and none the worse for wear, notwithstandstate in our country—and made a ten thousand mile tour of Europe, in the last ninety days. He is here directing the arrangments for his six hundred and second Mill End Sale which opened and second Mill End Sale which opened to a pat Dayis Roper & Co. this week up at Davis, Roper & Co. this week. In reply to our reporter's inquirles the Colonel gave a most interesting description of his trip to England and the

I spent six weeks in Europe with my wife and daughther studying the dry goods business in all its details as conlucted over there-and let me tell you one thing,—our dry goods and department stores right here in the state of South Carolina are conducted on a better system—are more progressive and "up to date" than many of the pretentious houses in London and Paris, and the more I saw of European methods the closer I got to the people clared unconstitutional, and it is not over there, and the better insight I got probable that the Legislature will perinto their various modes and habits of life, and the various forms of government under which each country lived—the better satisfied I became with our own p. ople, and our own ways of living, and our own manner of conducting things over here. I think no one can tally cleared. They will hardly be actually realize what a blessed privi-lege it is to be an American citizen ustil he has spent some time in Europe. I know that I always come back a more loyal, a more enthusiastic and a more patriotic American; and I always feel partotic American; and I always feet that this truly American growth and progress in itself amply repays the time and expense of the journey."

"Our hotels," the colonel said, "are infinitely better than anything you find overthere, and very much cheaper. The service, however, is, in some respects, better, and the traveller re-ceives more courtes'es and attention in European hotels and upon the railroads than he does here. They are very po-lite over there, wherever you go, and it, is quite delightful to receive so many delicate attentions. I enjoyed the trip immersely-every one does-and my business interests are now such that I go across twice a year. The trip is easily made and quite inexpensive, and while I am not posing as a "Cook Tourist," if you or any of your friends want to go over next June, pack your grips and come along with me I will showlyou how it can be done cheaply and thoroughly—and at the same time will show you how I conduct the Mill End Sale in London add Paris"

Cur reporter accepted the colonel's business interests are now such that I initiation of the enterprise is encouraging, and we note it with pleasure as aging, and we note it with pleasure as an enterprise of Laurens county. Clinton has a noble population with the courage of their convictions. We rejoice in the proposed mill will be for the up-building not only of Laurens county, but of South Carolina. The name of Bailey ought to be a synonym of success. So we await with the more confidence, the proposed enterprise to a fidence the proposed enterprise to a successful conclusion:

Fine progress is being made toward the establishment of the second cotton mill for C inton. What is wanted to begin with, is a $60,000 plant operating 5,000 spindles. Of the capital stock about one half has been subscribed, and the books are now open for receiving the capital subscriptions wanted. This mill will manufacture cotton goods both varue and clothe cotton goods, both yarns and cloths.

A one wishing to subscribe and take stock, even if only one share in the enterprise, is invited to come forward and subscribe, whether they are prepared with the ready cash or not; the matter can be arranged and the work begun at once.

This new enterprise is one of the things necessary to the growth and prosperity of Clinton and the community, and the Gazette rejoices because of the spirit of enterprise that is awakening our people. And now is the time to "strike while the iron is hot." The mill will be located out on the Bell estate near the town, where is Bell estate near the town, where is plenty of water and the best of clay for making the brick, which will be made on the ground and placed in the walls of Factory No. 2 just as rapidly as the cash can push it along.

Mr. M. S. Bailey is at the head of the enterprise, and we are sure of the materialization and success of the project.

Michigan, and especially Grand Rapids, as everyone knows stands pre-eminent in the furniture manufacturing industry. It is therefore the higher praise for the Laurens Furniture Factory that the "Daily Furniture Record." of Grand Rapids, speaks turing industry. It is therefore the ture Record," of Grand Rapids, speaks able to carry out any obligations made as follows of its exhibit at the Furniture Exhibition, now going on:

A FINE SOUTHERN LINE.

One of the very latest and most creditable furniture exhibits to make its appearance in the Grand Rapids market is the line of chamber suites, odd dressers and chiffoniers manufactured dressers and chiffoniers manufactured by the Laurens Furniture Co., of Laurens, S. C. The delay in the setting up of this fine line of Southern goods was occasioned by the car being lost in transit. The goods were shipped December 25th, but did not reach Grand Rapids until January 10th Mr. E. H. Wilkes, President of the company, is personally in charge of the exhibit, which is being shown in the Furniture Exhibition building. The line is handled by the Klingman Furniture Co., and in design, style and finish is a leader among the Southern furniture exhibits of its kind. The designer of these substantial goods is that wellthese substantial goods is that well-known gentleman, A. L. Stewart of Chicago. The goods are all in veneered quartered oak, and the prices range from $15 to $50. The Laurens furniture factory has an annual capacity of $150,000, and its goods were exhibited last July for the first time. The plant was established two years ago. L. H. Swift, formerly superintendent of the Woodard Furniture Co. of Owosso, is now associated with the Laurens company in the same capacity.
