THE longest month in Lorry's life was that which followed his romantic flight from the tower. To his impatient mind the days were irksome weeks. The cold monastery was worse than a prison. He looked from its windows as a convict looks through his bars, always hoping, always disappointed. With each of the infrequent visits of Captain Quinnox his heart leaped at the prospect of liberty, only to sink deeper in despair upon the receipt of emphatic though kindly assurances that the time had not yet come for him to leave the haven of safety into which he had been thrust by loving hands.

The prior was kind to him. Every thing that could be done to provide comfort where comfort was a stranger was employed in his behalf. He lived well until his appetite deserted him. He had no questions to answer, for no one asked why he was there; he had no danger to fear, for no foe knew where he lived. From the city came the promise of ultimate escape, verbai messages from those who loved him, news of the world-all at long intervals, however. Quinnox's visits were like sunbeams to him. The dashing captain came only at night and in disguise. He bore verbal messages, a wise precaution against mishap. Not once did he bring a word of love from the princess, an omission which caused the fugitive deep misery until a ray of not give to Quinnox the speeches from her heart, proud woman that she was. Anguish sent words of cheer, with commands to be patient. He never failed to tell him through Quinnox that he was doing all in his power to find the real murderer and that he had the secret co-operation of the old police captain. Of course the hidden man heard of the reward and the frenzied search prosecuted by both principalities. He laughed hyterically over the deception that was being practiced by the blue eyed, slender woman who held intelligence showed him that she could the key to the situation in her keeping. It was not until the night of the 18th of November that Ouinnox confirmed his fears by telling him of the conditions imposed by Prince Bolaroz. For some reason the young officer had deceived Lorry in regard to the all important matter. The American repeatedly had begged for information about the fatal 20th, but on all previous occasions his visitor doggedly maintained a show of ignorance, vowing that he knew nothing of the circumstances Finally Lorry, completely out of patience and determined to know the true state of affairs, soundly upbraided him and sent word to the princess that if she did not acquaint him with the inside facts he would leave the monastery and find them out for himself. This authoritative message brought Quinnox back two nights later with the full story of the exciting conference. She implored him to remain where he was and asked his forgiveness for having kept the ugly truth from him. Quinnox added to his anguish by hastily informing him that there was a possibility of succor from another principality. Prince Gabriel, he said, not knowing that he was cutting his listener to the heart, was daily with the was ready to loan Graustark sufficient money to meet the demand of Bolaroz The mere thought that Gabriel was with her aroused the fiercest resentment in Lorry's breast. As he paced his narrow room distractedly a horrid thought struck him so violently that he cried aloud and staggered against the wall, his eyes fixed on the face of the startled soldier. Perhaps she might submit to Gabriel. for in submitting she could save not only Graustark, but the man she loved. The sacrifice-but no, he would not believe that such affliction could come to her! Marry Gabriel - the man who had planned to seize her and make her his wanton! He ground his teeth and glared at Quinnox as if he were the object of his hatred, his vicious jealousy, The captain stepped backward in sudden alarm. "Don't be afraid!" Lorry cried savngely. "I'm not crazy. It's your news -your news! Does she expect me to stay up here while that state of affairs exists down there? Let me see; this is the 18th, and day after tomorrow is the 20th. There is no time to be lost, Captain Quinnox. I shall accompany you when you leave St. Valentine's to-

"Impossible!" exclaimed Quinnox. "I cannot allow that, sir. My instructions are to". "Hang your Instructions! All the instructions on earth can't compel me to sit up here and see this sacrifice made. I am determined to see her and put a stop to the whole affair. It is what I feared would come to pass. She is willing to sacrifice herself or half her kingdom, one or the other, in order that I may escape. It's not right, captain: it's not right, and I'm going to stop it. How soon can we leave this place?' He was pacing the floor, happy in the decision he had reached, notwithstanding the danger it promised. "You are mad, sir, to talk like this," protested the other despairingly. "Edelweiss swarms with Axphain soldiers; our own men are on the alert to win the great reward. You cannot go to the city. When a safe time comes, you will be taken from this place, into the mountains instead of through the city. and given escort to Dassas, 100 miles east. That step will not be taken until the way is perfectly clear. I tell you, sir, you cannot hope to escape if you leave the monastery now. The mountains are full of soldiers every night." "I didn't say anything about an escape, did 1? On the contrary, I want to give myself up to her. Then she can bave Gabriel thrown over the castle wall and say to Bolaroz: 'Here is your man. I've gained the ten years of grace.' That's the point, Quinnox. Can't you see it? And I want to say to you now I'm going whether you consent or refuse. I'd just as soon be in jail down there as up here anyhow.

The only favor I have to ask of you is bright. that you do the best you can to get me safely to her. I must talk with her before I go back to the tower."

"God help me, sir, I cannot take you to her?" groaned Quinnox, trying to control his nervous apprehension. "I control his nervous apprehension. have sworn to her that I will keep you from all harm, and it would be to break faith with her if I led you into that mob down there." mob down there."

>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>> "I respect your oath, my friend, but I too, if I have to shoot every man who attempts to prevent me. I'm desperate, man, desperate! She's everything in the world to me, and I'll die before I'll see her suffer."

Quinnox calmly placed his hands on the other's shoulders, and, looking him in the eye, said quietly:

"Her suffering now is as nothing compared to what it will be if you go back to the tower. You forget how much pain she is enduring to avoid that very suffering. If you care for my mistress, sir, add no weight to the burden she already carries. Remain here. as she desires. You can be of no service down there. I implore you to be considerate."

It was an eloquent appeal, and it struck home. Lorry wavered, but his resolution would not weaken. He argued first with Quinnox, then with himself, finally returning to the reck-less determination to brave all and save her from herself. The soldier begged him to listen to reason, implored him to reconsider, at last turning in anger upon the stubborn American with a torrent of maledictions. Lorry heard him through and quietly, unswervingly, announced that he was ready to leave the monastery at any time his guide cared to depart. Quinnox gave up in despair at this, gazing hopelessly at the man he had sworn to protect, who insisted on placing his head in the lion's jaw. He sat down at the window and murmured deject

"What will she say to me-what will she say to me?" "I shall exonerate you, captain. She can have no fault to find with your action after I have told her how loyal you are and how-how-well, how unreasonable I am," said Lorry kindly.

"You may never live to tell her this, sir. Then what is to become of me? could not look her in the face again. could only die!"

"Don't be so faint hearted, Quinnox!" cried Lorry, stimulated by the desire to be with her, recognizing no obstacle that might thwart him in the effort. "We'll get through safe and sound, and we'll untangle a few complications before we reach the end of the book. Brace up, for heaven's sake, for mine for hers, for your own. I must get fear that she may marry Gabriel will drive me mad if I am left here an other night. Come! Let us prepare to start. We must notify the abbot that I am to go. I can be ready in five minutes. Ye gods, think of what she may be sacrificing for me!"

Lorry soon was attired in the guard's uniform he had worn from the towe month before. His pistol was in his pocket, and the bunch of violets all had sent to him that very night was pinned defiantly above his heart. Quinnox smiled when he observed this bit of sentiment, and grimly informed him that he was committing an act proabited in Dangloss' disciplinary rules. Officers on duty were not to wear

"Dangloss will not see my violets. By the way, the moon shines brightly,

"It is almost as light as day. Our trip is made extremely hazardous for that resison. I am sorely afraid, rash sir, that we cannot reach the eastle

"We must go about it boldly: that's

"Has it occurred to you, sir, that you are placing me in a terrible position; What excuse can I have, a captain of the guard, for slinking about at night with a man whom I am supposed to be tracking to earth? Discovery will brand me as a traitor. I cannot deny the charge without exposing her royal highness."

Lorry turned cold. He had not thought of this alarming possibility But his ready wit came again to his relief, and with bright, confident eyes he swept away the obstacle.

"If discovered, you are at once to proclaim me a prisoner, take the credit for having caught me and claim the reward."

"In that case you will not go to the castle, but to the tower." "Not if you obey orders. The offer of reward says that I must be delivered to the undersigned. You will take me to her and not to the tower." Quinnox smiled and threw up his hands as if unable to combat the quick logic of his companion. Together they made their way to the prior's cell, aftgrward to the abbot's apartment. It was barely 11 o'clock, and he had not retired. He questioned Quinnox closely, bade Lorry farewell and blessed him, sent his benediction to the princess and ordered them conducted to the

"'Gad, it is like day," he exclaimed. "As I told you, sir," agreed the other, "We must wait until the moon goes down. It won't do to risk it now. Can we not go somewhere to keep warm for an hour or so?" "There is a cave farther down the mountain. Shall we take the chance of reaching it?"

"By all means. I can't endure the old after being cooped up for so

They followed the winding road for some distance down the mountain, coming at last to a point where a small path branched off. It was the path leading down the side of the steep side no wagon road could be built. Seven thousand feet below stretched the sleeping, moonlit city. Standing out on the brow of the mountain, they seemed to be the only living objects in the world. There was no sign of life

"How long should we be in making the descent?" asked Lorry, a sort of terror possessing him as he looked from the dizzy height into the ghostlike limness below.

"Three hours if you are strong." "And how are we to get into the castle? I hadn't thought of that."

"There is a secret entrance," said Quinnox, maliciously enjoying the in sistent one's acknowledgment of weak ness. "If we reach it safely, I can take you under ground to the old dungeons beneath the castle. It may be some time before you can enter the halls above, for the secret passage is guarded jealously. There are but five people who know of its existence."

"Great confidence is placed in you, ee, and worthily, I am sure. How is it that you are trusted so implicitly?"
"I inherit the confidence. The cap tain of the guard is born to his posttion. My ancestors held the place be fore me, and not one betrayed the trust. The firstborn in the last ten generations has been the captain of the guard in the royal palace, possessing all its secreis. I shall be the first to be tray the trust, and for a man who is

"I suppose you consider me selfish and vile for placing you in this position," said Lorry, somewhat contritely. "No. I have begun the task, and will complete it, come what may," an swered the captain firmly. "You are the only being in the world for whom I would sacrifice my honor voluntarily

"I bave wondered wby you were never tempted to turn traitor to the princess and claim the fortune that is epresented in the reward." "Not for 5,000,000 gayvos, sir!"

"By George, you are a faithful lot-Dangloss, Allode and Ogbot and your self, four honest men to whom she trusts her life, her honor! You belong to a rare species, and I am proud to (TO BE CONTINUED.

HOW IS THE COTTON MARKET?

Throughout commercial circles for several months past this has been an oft repeated question.

There are those who are specially interested in the price of spot cotton; others in the manufactured goods, and it is to the atter class that we attempt to make reply.

There is a marked advance on certain standard makes in heavy Domestics, but the prices have not advauced in proportion

We realize that this is claiming a great deal, and we could not afford to make this assertion unless we knew that we could prove it to be true. But it does not take an expert to test the softness of a Mineral Water. When carbonating a mineral water, if it is a hard water the gases will not be absorbed in the water, and when the bottle is opened, the gases escape, and the water is left flat and hard, while if it is a soft water, like White Stone Lithia, it will retain its gases for hours after being unstopped. Dear Sir—I do unhesitatingly state that the efficacy of White Stone Lithia Water, not from its splendid analytical analysis, but from my own personal observation, is a very valuable agent in eliminating the impurities of the blood through its marked diuretic effects, and in so doing restores the secretory and excretory organs of the body to their normal physiological state. So in this proves its properties to be of great value in assisting digestion, assimilation and increasing the appetite. Therefore we can recognize it as a mineral water of powerful tonle properties and should be highly recommended in stomach and liver disorders, blood disturbances, rheumatism, gout, diabetes, Bright's disease, and in all inactive conditions of the kidneys and convalescing diseases.
