YELLOW FEVER IN NEW ORLEANS

Heroic Efforts Being Made to Check Disease.

SHOTGUN QUARANTINE

The Record Shows Total Cases 302, Total Number of Deaths 62. Much Excitement.

The yellow fever record in New Orleans shows total number of cases to date 302; total number of deaths, 62. On Saturday the authorities found 31 new cases, 27 on Sunday and 21 on Monday. Thus it would appear that the disease has been checked somewhat in its spread, despite the fact that it has jnmped from one part of the city to another, rendering the situation a very difficult one for the health department Strict quarantine measures are in force and it is the hope of the authorities to have the situation under control by the last of this week.

The outbreak of "Yellow Jack" in the Crescent City has caused much excitement, not only in New Orleans, but in all coast cities in the South. Quarantines every where are being drawn tighter and tighter and as a consequence all business and railroad traffic suffering. A number of towns in Louisiana and Mississippi are cutting themselves off from the world and shotgun quarantines are being extended. In Charleston precautionary measures have been adopted and everything possible will be done to prevent the disease from entering the city.
