Come to see us.

A few moments to prepare the food The "CALORIC" will do the rest.

Think of what it would mean to you to spend only a few moments in preparing the meals with the balance of the day at your disposal. With a "Caloric" you can do this—it is being done in thousands upon thousands of homes. The Caloric Cookstove has completely changed the method of cooking, reducing woman's work and making her life more pleasant every day in the week throughout the year.

It has reduced the cost of living in fuel and food, and has saved hours of kitchen drudgery, which have been spent in visiting, shopping, reading or resting. In many instances it has saved the expense of a servant (thereby paying for itself in a few weeks) it has made possible much better cooked meals.

We understand how impossible this must seem to one who has not used a "Caloric" cookstove, but some that were the most skeptical are now among the most enthusiastic users.

You need and cannot afford to be without

A "Caloric" Cookstove

It is entirely different from the so-called "fireless-cookers"—far superior in every way. The interior is lined throughout with "luminite" metal which can be scalded and wiped clean. It is absolutely sanitary. Furnished complete with full set of solid aluminum utensils. We positively guarantee the "Caloric" to do all that we claim for it. You take no risk in buying one. Made in 15 sizes to suit the needs and purse of any family.

stations because they were equipped by training and experience so to do. Another slander is that the South fought to perpetuate slavery. The issue was not slavery. Nor was the war fought by the North to free the slaves, except as an after thought. The principle for which we fought was local self government and three-fifths of those who fought had never owned slaves.

The slave trade was introduced by England, South Carolina and Virginia wanted to get rid of the slave trade before the war with England. After we had wrested independence from Old England, New England took up the infamous slave trade. Many of the fortunes, which there have blossomed so beautifully in the last half century have their roots planted deep in the dirty black soil of the slave trade.

Dr. Lodge declared that he would say nothing to disturb the present harmony between sections, but let the record be kept straight. New England abandoned the use of slaves for economic reasons and then opposed it for political reasons, for they did not wish too many Southern men in congress. The hypocrisy of it! New England gathered up the slaves from their home in Africa, sold them to the South, then came down with cannon and rifle to steal them away from us.

The Right to Secede.

Did we have the right to secede? That question has been settled so far as the force and arms is concerned, but in the eternal verities we were right then and that principle will be right until Gabriel blows his horn. The 13 colonies were bound to England, each by an individual cord, none having authority over the others. The sword of Washington severed the cords and in the treaty of peace they were recognized as free and independent States. In the constitution the States "retained" their "sovereignty." They sometimes say that Lee was a traitor and that Jackson was a rebel. The text books on constitutional law at West Point when Lee and Jackson and Davis were cadets there teach us that the States had the right to secede. If these men were traitors it was because they were made so by the government while they were cadets.

Noah Webster's dictionary juggled with the words "sovereignty" and "independence." In the first edition the definitions were in keeping with the idea taught in the South. But in the second edition published during the excitement of 1861 the meaning had been changed by the Northern editors.

New England's Inconsistency.

Was it right to secede? In 1803 when the Louisiana purchase matter was pending and it seemed probable that the South would have additional representation in congress, New England said: "We will go out of the Union if you take in this new State." Josiah Quincy said: "It will be the right of all and the duty of some to prepare for separation amicably if possible, forcibly if necessary."

Again when New England shipping was harassed by British maritime and New England sailors were pressed into British service, a Southern president went to war for New England! And then what did New England do? She tried to paralyze the arm of the government, to hamper the progress of the war and some of her sons were in treasonable communication with the enemy. The Hartford convention of 1814 would have declared for secession had not the speedy signing of the treaty of peace thwarted their plans.

The difference is this: The South seceded when the nation was strong and not beset from without by a foreign foe. New England threatened to secede when a common foe was weakening the defenses of the government.

In 1845 Texas wanted to come in. Massachusetts again said: "We will secede if you do." And now we wish to God that she had. But 16 years later when the South seceded the troops from Massachusetts shed the blood of Southern citizens on the streets of Baltimore for doing the very thing which Massachusetts would have done before.

Even Daniel Webster admitted the right to secede. And just here Dr. Lodge stopped to deplore the fact that he had heard in some schools young boys get up and declaim with much gusto Webster's reply to Hayne, when the latter's matchless oration is itself forgotten. While perhaps it may not be so attractive of rhetoric yet it was unanswerable then and no Yankee has lived or will ever live who can answer it.

At Capon Springs, Va., in 1851, Mr. Webster made a speech in which he admitted that he was wrong. Dr. Lodge read a few extractions to prove this assertion and commented that in 1830 Mr. Webster was relatively a youngster—at the time of his reply to Hayne—while at Capon Springs, Va., he was old enough to be a statesman. Dr. Lodge read some strong extracts from a Northern writer who declared that Mr. Webster's reply to Mr. Hayne was not an argument but was the grossest kind of special pleading and was a skillful defense of an unconstitutionality.

Said Dr. Lodge: "Tankee sentiment was too strong for us to combat with reasoning. They had the money, they had the armament, they had the ships, and they won by force."

While the North was contending for an unconstitutionality the South was standing by the bedrock principles.

The South was tricked into the Union in the belief that her rights would have been maintained and then the compact was broken. The South had as much right to secede as a Northern State and have to take up arms today if she be deprived of representation in Congress.

Imperialism and Trusts.

All the great wrongs and political infamy of today are the result of the North's denial of the principles for which the South fought. This bastard imperialism which we exercise over the Philippines puts us in the pillory of the world's scorn and has made apostates of a democratic people. We of the South do not believe in this imperialism. We believe in the doctrine of "the consent of the governed," but the North, which in 1861 was loud voiced for that same principle, now declaims for imperialism.

Again, this infamous protective tariff could not be levied if there were a strict construction of the constitution, such as the South has always demanded. It is on this iniquitous tariff that the vampire trusts feed their putrid verius.

Roosevelt's New Ideas.

Having paid his respects to the imperialistic and tariff policies to which the nation has been brought by loose construction of the constitution, Dr. Lodge then gave warning of another danger which he sees.

A certain man, he said, has just come back from the jungles of Africa, where the lions failed to do their duty. With much pomposity and a great flourish of front teeth he poses as a prophet.

He comes with a doctrine, which in his bombastic manner and balloon like conceit he calls "the new nationalism." What is new is not true and what is true is not new. This "new nationalism" is merely old federalism, old centralization of power, old despotism.

The man who propounds this pernicious doctrine is a braggart, an egotistical demagogue and a traitor.

Eloquently Dr. Lodge urged that the people should turn their eyes from him to the man of New Jersey, Woodrow Wilson, Southern born, true to the old ideals of the South, a man who is sure to be governor of New Jersey and is great enough to guide the destinies of a nation.

Let us be conservative, urged Dr. Lodge. Let us build up the South but do so with prudence and discretion and forsaking not the traditions of the old South—love for the law and the constitutional rights.

With a beautiful peroration in which he spoke of the gallantry of the Confederate soldier, Dr. Lodge concluded his address. He declared that his heart was full and he wished to talk of many things, but the hour was growing late and the sun was quite warm and trying on the immense crowd. He was urged to go on but brought his address to a close.

CLEVER WOMEN.

Always Keep Their Hair Fascinating and Free from Dandruff.

Almost everybody in Laurens knows that there is no preparation for the hair that can compare with Parisian Sage.

It cures dandruff, stops falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks, or money back.

It puts radiance and luster into that dull, lifeless hair that many women possess, and does it in a few days.

On March 25, 1910, Lulu D. Fix of Raphine, Va., wrote: "Parisian Sage is a wonderful hair restorer; it stopped my hair from falling out and stopped my scalp from itching; also cured the dandruff."

Parisian Sage is sold by Laurens Drug Co. for 50 cents a large bottle.
