Lisbon Locals.

Lisbon, Aug. 3.—Farmers have decided that to plow cotton now, would be injurious to the plant, and so have made up their minds to take a few days' rest. You can't imagine how hard we have toiled since the early spring set in, and we do hope that we will be well paid for our labor with a good yield of both cotton and corn. Yet we can't hope for much unless we get a good rain real soon and the outcome has to be very great if we realize a first-class crop. We see no army worms yet, and hope that we never will, as to that. If they were to hit our cotton and corn at this stage of the game, some of us would be bankrupt, and it might bankrupt somebody else. We mean the bankers, who have been so kind to let us have money the year round. We have nothing but a good word for those bankers in your city. What could we do without them. Some of the politicians give the banks, and corporation fits. Then they will go to some of these same people and ask for help. Now, we are going to be plain with you. We can't see how these politicians can go around from stump to stump, and tell the people how these corporations are crushing the very life and existence out of them. These people are a necessity and they are the ones who save their earnings to help those who will not save, and we have nothing but praise for them. We hope when the state campaign meeting comes off at Laurens that our people will show them that we don't believe in rowdism, and if any of those who are running for state office, use language that is not parliamentary the police will take charge of him and teach him that it is the wrong place to use language unbecoming a gentleman.
