TREATMENT GIVEN FOR HORSE DISEASE

State Veterinarian Make Inspection of the Horse Disease Epidemic in Upper Part of County.

W. Ray Powers, state veterinarian, has made an inspection of the area in the upper portion of the county and lower Greenville county in which so many horses have died recently. The veterinarian has suggested in a more minute form about the same treatment given by Mr. W. P. Harris in The Advertiser of last week.

The directions are as follows: "Medical treatment is unsatisfactory and practically useless in the majority of cases, as the central nervous system has usually undergone degenerative changes before the symptoms develop. When the animal is noticed before the ability to swallow is lost, a purgative should be given immediately. One oz. and a half of Barbadoes aloes dissolved in a quart of warm water is probably the most satisfactory although three quarters of a pound or one pound of Epsom salts (well diluted) or one qt. to one qt. and a half of raw linseed oil may be given. It will be noticed that these are larger doses than ordinarily recommended for horses or mules. If animals have difficulty in swallowing or are unable to swallow, drenching is not to be attempted, as the drugs will pass to the lungs and cause a fatal attack of pneumonia in the majority of cases. Cathartics administered hypodermically are far safer and of quicker action than those mentioned above and if veterinarians are available, their services should be secured immediately. Where veterinarians are not available it is possible that the local physician will administer such cathartics. Heart stimulants, narcotics, etc., are also indicated at various stages of disease, but their administration should be left to the veterinarian. Potassium iodide in one and a half dram doses should be given twice daily as soon as the animal is able to swallow. All horses and mules on the premises should be given complete change of food.

Prevention.

Do not feed moldy corn or fodder. If necessary to feed corn of poor quality, this should be shelled and poured into water before feeding. Most of the damaged kernels will float and can be skimmed off. The balance should be mixed with other grain if possible. Careful supervision of the feeding of horses and mules will prevent this disease."

When you want a reliable medicine for a cough or cold take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It can always be depended upon and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all dealers.

JEW DAVID,
By Wm. D. S.

He was a citizen of the city down on the Congaree. He was a vendor of jewelry and a slick talker. He wheedled Brother Jim in buying three hundred dollars' worth of watches and table ware. In a few years he had a lot of brass and black spoons. After the war his son came up to try his hand at the peddling business. Below my house, his horse ran away with his buggy, and threw David out in the road, also his trunk of jewelry was scattered along the road down to the mill. I heard a noise like thunder and ran out to see the cause. It was his horse running over the bridge with the buggy. We headed off the horse. And soon we heard the most terrible lamentation up the road, and saw David coming bare headed, saying at the top of his voice: Oh! I am ruined, all my jewelry is gone! My horse has torn up the buggy, and bursted up my trunk and lost all my goods." I called up Miller Woods and we quieted down the boy, got up the half bushel measures and went to picking up his jewelry. We found it on the bridge and in the road up to where the trunk was stove up. We got him a new trunk out of the store and packed his stuff into it. He lost but few pieces, that fell through the floor of the bridge. We soon had him on the road again, ready to sell our people 18 carat gold watches and sterling silver spoons.

MRS. CORNWALLIS-WEST'S UNUSUAL INSPIRATION

Is the spirit of William Shakspeare guiding the hand and brain of Mrs. Cornwallis-West—London society favorite and creator and manager of the wonderful "Shakspeare's England" festival held at Earle's court?

This is generally believed to be true by Londoners, who declare that no woman like Mrs. West, who has made society a vocation instead of the amusement business, could possibly show the genius in management and the business ability to put on what is no doubt one of the biggest single amusement projects ever witnessed in England.

That the Bard of Avon has influenced this woman successfully to carry out the festival that does honor to his memory is believed by all but the most skeptical who have seen the exhibition.

If Shakspeare's spirit did not influence Mrs. West, what accounts for her sudden inspiration to stage the picturesque scenes of Elizabethan England at the cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Giving up her social duties and working nine hours each day and many extra nights organizing the big show on speculation.

Superintending the construction of the buildings of that period.

Poring over works of history and devoting days upon days to the designing of certain costumes in order to have the smallest detail historically correct.

Leaving Mayfair and the brilliant court of St. James after a life of idle luxury and plunging into hard labor.

And, above all, showing a genius in the work which is said by experts to be worthy of the great poet himself.

Mrs. West displayed such splendid genius that many of her friends and acquaintances believe that even with the knowledge of English history she has she could not have revived those days of tilts and jousts with such accuracy as she has shown.

The story is most mysterious because Mrs. West will neither deny nor confirm it. This much, however, is known: She spent months wandering over every inch of the ground with its ivy-grown cottages and gay gardens that was beloved by the great English poet; she spent hours visiting the homes in which he once lived and then took her books and read, and meditated and talked Shakspeare with everybody who loves the great English dramatist and his works. It is said that when her work was completed and she went back to London prior to the pageant, Marie Corelli said to her: "It will be a wonderful success. It must be, for Shakspeare will be with you at the pageant and will direct the show. If you follow his instruction you will be well rewarded, for he will not leave you after the pageant is over. He is with many great writers, inspiring them to do their best, and he will remain with you. If it were not for his great genius and that of others who have gone to the great unknown there would be few writers in the world today. It is Shakspeare and the lesser lights who have inspired me and others to do their best."

Since everybody is congratulating Mrs. West on her splendid success, she cannot forget the words that Marie Corelli spoke to her. She is beginning to wonder if there is some half truth in these words, and that she may yet be aided to do great works with her pen.

FRANZ JOSEF ASKS POPE TO STOP TURKISH WAR

In a personal letter, penned with his own hand, the aged Emperor Franz Josef has made an appeal to Pope Pius to urge intervention between Italy and Turkey and bring about the close of a war which his imperial majesty describes as a grave danger to the progress of civilization.

"In the emperor writes, "the war is uniting Islam against Christians the world over. Morally it has been a great mistake."

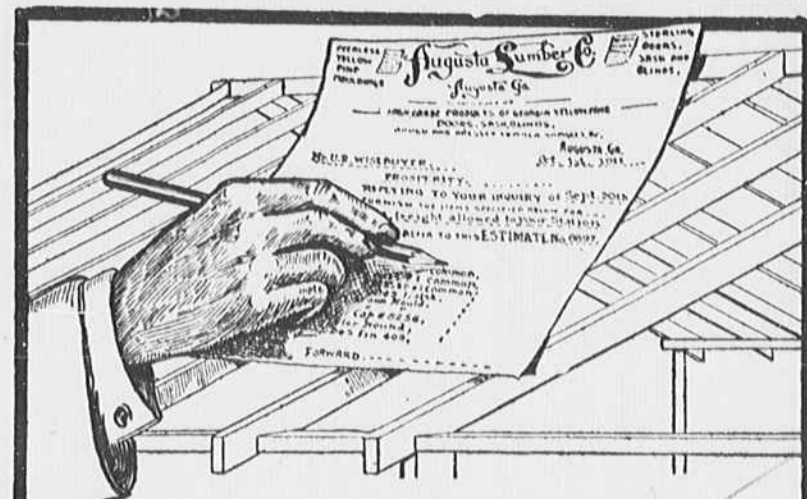

The letter was conveyed to Rome by a special court messenger, who received a handsome gift from his holiness. No intimation was made to the nunciature here, owing to the peculiar delicacy of the situation and the desire of the emperor to keep the nature of the correspondence secret. The Nuncio was informed of the emperor's act by a friend in the papal secretariat of state. He feels deeply incensed, and has since kept away from the imperial palace where he was previously a constant visitor.

Why Salves Can't Cure Eczema

Since the old-fashioned theory of curing eczema through the blood has been given up by scientists, many different salves have been tried for skin diseases. But it has been found that these salves only clog the pores and cannot penetrate to the inner skin below the epidermis where the eczema germs are lodged.
This—the quality of penetrating—probably explains the tremendous success of the well known fluid eczema remedy, oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc., as compounded in D.D.D. Prescription.
We have sold other remedies for skin troubles but none that we can recommend as highly as this for we know that D.D.D. stops the itch at once. We just want you to give D.D.D. a trial. That will be enough to prove it.
Of course all other druggists have D.D.D. Prescription—go to them if you can't come to us—but don't accept some big profit substitute.
But if you come to our store, we are so certain of what D.D.D. will do for you that we offer you a full size bottle on this guarantee:—If you do not find that it takes away the itch AT ONCE, it costs you not a cent.
