ACT WENT BIG UNTIL ENCORE

Actor's Assisted Exit Is Surrounded by Rather Violent Circumstances.

GETS THE BOSS' GOAT

Saloonkeeper Borrows Twenty-Five Cents to Give Panhandler Who Comes Back Next Day and Demands Remainder of Dollar.

New York.—The hurried battering to and fro of a squeaky swinging door and the gentle thud of an actor en route from the bar to the pavement are sounds not unusual on, in and around Broadway—especially if it is a bad actor. The other day, however, an assisted exit was surrounded by such violent circumstances that a rather large audience gathered.

In this case the door was removed entirely, the actor went further, landed harder and bounded higher than usual and the remarks of the sole owner of the premises were nothing short of exquisite in their variety and intensity. Violence Ensued.

Inquiry within the damp room brought forth no satisfactory explanation. The customers had noticed a well-dressed young man walk over to the owner and say about five words to him. Then the violence which ended with the young man's excursion into the open began. This being so, there was nothing to do but to ask the boss about the mystery. He was approached as he sat having his shoes shined as if in an effort to beguile life anew after a moment of horror. He told all—freely.

"Last night," he said, in a totally unconscious imitation of Lew Fields, "that actor came in here and began acting. He said he had just come back from the West and that he was as flat as a cookie and needed a dollar. I told him I needed a dollar. I told him I hadn't even the sport of going West and that I needed a dollar bad. I'd accept fifty cents even.

"Well, then he began acting. He rolled his eyes and asked if I was going to let him stay in the street and Landed Harder and Bounded Higher. asked me where was my heart and if I had a soul, and, if so, what was the idea.

Worried the Boss. "I couldn't get rid of him. Every time I waited on a customer he ran along in front of the bar parallel with me and asked me how I could act that way and if he hadn't been a good fellow when he had it. I never knew him when he had it. Well, anyway, he pleaded, demanded and talked about that dollar until one o'clock in the morning. When I started home he started after me.

"Up at the corner he asked me, throwing his arms out wide, if I realized that there was one above looking down on me and watching what I was going to do about the dollar.

"Well, I can stand just so much. I didn't have a cent in my pocket, but I called to a hackman I know and asked him if he would let me have a quarter. He gave it to me and I gave it to that blockhead and told him that if I ever saw his face again I would knock him from under it. I bid him good-by forever in this life."

The boss paused. "Well?" was the natural inquiry, "what happened today?" "The boss hissed through his teeth. "He came in and asked me for the seventy-five cents I owed him."

Aged Pastor Elopes. Fruitvale, Cal.—Marriage has no terrors for Rev. James Sunderland. After being married four times in church, with a gathering of friends on hand each time to congratulate him at the completion of the ceremonies, he eloped with Miss Mary Ham and was married quietly in Monterey.

Rev. Mr. Sunderland is eighty-two years old and his bride, Miss Mary Ham, is seventy-five years old. The bride is the sister of his fourth wife. She has been keeping house for him since her sister's death some time ago.

WOMAN ALL RUN DOWN

Made Strong and Well By Vinol. Waynesboro, Pa.—"I was all run down after a hard spell of bronchitis so it was hard for me to keep about. I had pains in my chest and took cold easily. A friend asked me to try Vinol. I did, and it built me up so I am strong and well and I am able to do my housework which I had not done for three months before taking Vinol."—Mrs. Y. R. HORSOUR, Waynesboro, Pa.

Vinol creates an appetite, aids digestion, makes pure blood and creates strength. Your money back if it fails. THE LAURENS DRUG CO., LAURENS Also at the leading drug store in all South Carolina towns.

ORIGIN OF CURFEW BELL

Merely Served as Warning to Cover Fire in the Time of William the Conqueror.

So many towns ring the curfew bell to warn the children that 9 o'clock p. m. must find them safe in the home nest, it is interesting to know that the curfew bell originated in the time of William the Conqueror, says a writer in the People's Home Journal. A "curfew" was a fire cover of metal, shaped like a hood, with a handle by which it was lifted. It had an opening on one side, and was about ten inches in height. Because fires in early days were made on large, open hearths, the smoke escaping through a hole in the roof, fire risk was great. It was ordered that every householder before retiring must cover his fire with a "couvre-feu," meaning "cover the fire." He scraped the embers together at the back of the hearth, putting the cover over them, the open part close against the chimney.

A bell was rung in the market place, at an early hour every night, as a signal that people must extinguish their fires and go to bed. The term "curfew" was associated with the ringing of the bell. But in William the Conqueror's time a curfew was nothing more poetical than a plain metal fire extinguisher.

Far Better.

In a neat English village lived a tobaccoist named Farr. Now, this tobaccoist had a rival. Both wanted the trade of the town. Farr, being a wit, devised a sign and hung it outside his shop: "Best tobacco by Farr."

The townsfolk, relishing a pun, flocked to his shop and his trade increased at the expense of his rival's business.

Now, his rival brooded and meditated, consulted many books of ancient lore, a Rogel's Thesaurus, and a rhyming dictionary. One day his face was seen to breathe itself in smiles. Gossip hovered expectant about his shop. The anticipations of the townsfolk were not disappointed. For that very day he hung out a sign which read: "Far better tobacco than the best by Farr."

Immersed in Self.

We are all too immersed in self—that is where the trouble lies. If we could only get out of ourselves enough to forget personal feelings in our relations with outsiders they would not have to suffer for no fault of their own. The stenographer and bookkeeper would not have to put up with their employer's irascibility, the maid would not have to endure her mistress's harsh faultfinding, the poor dramatist's play would not have to fail because of the critic's indigestion, and the singer would not be hopelessly set back because of the reviewer's gripe. All this, of course, will only come when we have learned a little about self-control and self-forgetfulness.

Valuable Wood.

The tree most valuable in the Guiana forests is that known as greenheart, or siperia. Greenheart is among Lloyds' list of eight first-class woods and is one of the strongest woods in use. It is employed largely in engineering and construction work, harbor works, railway trestles and bridges. The 50 large piers of lock gates in the Manchester ship canal are all built of greenheart from Demerara. Engineers have said it is impossible to estimate the durability of greenheart, particularly in the construction of docks, their lasting quality being limited only by the iron bolts and other fastenings used.
