

SALE OF AMERICAN GOODS

Minter Company's Department Store

Beginning Friday, January 18, at 9:00 O'Clock-Closing Saturday Night, January 26.

It is most unusual to have a clearance sale in the face of rapidly-advancing prices, and the great difficulty in securing goods, even after they have been shipped, but this is a progressive store, and the interest of our customers is ever before us, even at the sacrifice of our profit. A good part of the winter is yet to come. Everybody needs good warm clothing, and there are always many home, as well as personal, requirements, to be filled.

False economy (hoarding money and skimping on the necessities) plays no part in American life today. The spirit is, "Earn, Save, Give." You owe it to your purse, to yourself, to your country, to buy liberally, especially now; not only for the present, but as far into the future as possible. We already know approximately what the prices on goods will be next fall, and we don't wish to alarm you, but many lines of goods will be worth double the price they are today, and some cannot be obtained at any price. The last of January we take stock, and during these eight days we give you an opportunity to buy some goods cheaper than we can replace same. This sale includes all ladies' Coat Suits, Coats, Rain Coats, Silk Dresses, Serge Dresses, Silk Skirts, Wool Skirts, Millinery. Also, ladies' Fancy Shoes and Dress Shoes, and certain numbers in men's Dress and Work Shoes. All Men's and Boys' Overcoats, Rain Coats, Suits, and odd Pants.

This novel plan was acted upon with promptitude and the twins went back to the haymow. When it grew dark they slipped into the kitchen and huddled together on the woodbox beside the stove. And down to them presently came Fairy, smiling, her eyes tear-brightened. "She is better!" cried Carol, springing to her feet.

"Yes," said Fairy, dropping on her knees and burying her face in Lark's lap, as she still sat on the woodbox. "She's better. She is better." Lark patted the heaving shoulders in a motherly way, and when Fairy lifted her face again it was all serene, though her lashes were wet. "She is conscious," said Fairy, still on her knees, but with her head thrown back, and smiling. "She regained consciousness a little while pered, "why didn't you call out, or continue making some lines. And during this sale, at the matter.
