WORLD CONGRESS ON COTTON FORMED

Permanent Organization of World Cotton Conference Completed Yesterday. Officers Elected.

New Orleans, Oct. 16.—The world cotton conference came into permanent organization late today when a report submitted by the committee on organization was adopted. Sir A. Herbert Dixon, of Manchester, England, chairman of the British delegation to the conference, was elected secretary and the recommendation was made that the next conference be held in England in 1921.

Other officers elected were: General secretary, Rufus E. Foster, Boston; assistant secretary, Frank Nasmith, England; treasurer for European members, Sir James Hope Simpson; for the United States, W. Irving Ballard, Boston; vice presidents for the United States: F. E. Calloway, La Grange, Ga.; England, Edward B. Orme and John Smithers; France, George Badern; Belgium, Count Jean De Hemphine; Switzerland, Herman Bahler; Italy, Giorgio Mylius.

The recommendation by American members of the group on financing foreign credits and exports, that congress place at the disposal of the war finance corporation sufficient funds to permit the corporation to extend the exportation of at least a million bales of cotton was adopted. It was pointed out that the government had authorized the extension of $1,000,000,000 of credit to finance export, through the agency of the war finance corporation and it recommended the purchase of foreign securities against debentures which would be issued and sold in this country in order to get away from short term banking credits and stabilize the rate of exchange.

Recommendations of the growers, embodying fourteen points, were voted against in the objection of certain groups to several of the points. It was agreed finally, however, that the rules be suspended and that points in the growers' recommendation not previously killed at the general committee meeting be voted on. As a result all points in the growers' recommendation were adopted with the exception of those condemning the sale of cotton on call, favoring gin compression, condemning gambling in cotton and other necessities, recommending that there should consist only of the actual weight of the bagging and ties of the bale and urging closer cooperation between the grower and spinner.

Foreign spinners objected to the condemnation of the sale of cotton on call, declaring it was necessary that they should be allowed to purchase their cotton in that way. The ginners group objected to the gin compression recommendation. Because "gambling" was not defined the bankers' group voted against that feature of the recommendation, explaining that the futures market was a necessary part of the cotton industry and that dealing in cotton futures had often been classed as gambling.

The recommendations of the growers' committee which were unanimously approved after a suspension of the rules follow:

- Diversification of crops urged.
- Country damaged recognized as an inexcusable economic loss.
- Storage warehouses urged.
- Twelve more marketing systems for farmers recommended.
- Formation of the American export financing corporation endorsed.
- Tagging of each bale with the name and address of grower urged.
- Opposed price-fixing by government.
- Opposing embargo and restrictions on cotton in times of peace.
- Demanding a price for cotton covering cost of production and allowing a fair profit.

It was after an agreement was reached to suspend the rules that a number of British delegates left the hall. The report that the delegates from England had bolted the conference was circulated among the delegates, but was later disproved when Dr. John A. Todd of London explained that only about six of the eighty-three delegates had left the hall and that they went out to confer on the matter pertaining to a resolution.

A recommendation by the growers that all revenue taxes be removed from cotton seed oil products and markets enlarged was rejected by the conference, an adverse vote having been recorded by the textile manufacturers who announced they feared cotton would be raised more for seed than staple under conditions urged in the recommendation.

BELGIANS ENJOY JOURNEY ACROSS

Popular Passengers on the George Washington.

New York Oct. 14.—King Albert and Queen Elizabeth, of Belgium, after a week at sea, on their way to America became the most popular persons on board the George Washington. If it is possible to except that quiet, modest, likeable boy whom they call Prince Leopold, heir apparent to the Belgian throne. Each had some personal contact with officers and men, and in every quarter the opinion was expressed that while maintaining their official dignity they were, as one Southern Jackie expressed it, "mighty good folks."

One warm afternoon the king with Admiral Long, Captain McCauley and a member of his suite was playing "deck tennis." All the men were experts at the game, and the play was so close the king manifested the deepest interest. At length it came the king's turn to serve, and, looking the field over, he removed his blouse of a lieutenant general, and resumed play in his shirt sleeves. It happened that an official photographer was handy, and the scene was preserved for posterity.

Queen Elizabeth is an accomplished photographer, and has taken many photographs since coming on board. She knows light effects, position and all the other things which most amateurs lack, and while in Brussels keeps one man pretty busy developing and printing her pictures. During the games between the king and his friends she got a number of snaps and was herself photographed one day while she focused her camera on the royal party.

It was apparent from the beginning of the voyage that the queen was not to appear prominently in the news reports, it being made known to the correspondents that she did not particularly care for publicity of the intimate sort. But she did not hide herself, going to all parts of the ship and manifesting the liveliest interest in the sailors and soldiers.

In company with her lady in waiting, Countess Carman-Chimay, she visited the sickbay, and expressed her sympathy for the men who were ill. Her experience in the Belgian hospitals during the war told her the sickbay as ideally equipped and splendidly conducted, and she congratulated the medical force in charge.

In her apartments the queen maintained the atmosphere of her home, and one of the officers who dined with the royal family said of it afterwards: "It was just like going into the home of any other well bred family. The king and queen made us feel at ease, and in five minutes we were all chattering away just as well would if we were at the table of one of our old friends. To me it seemed that these royal people of little Belgium were cultured and refined and very human. I will remember that dinner as one of the most pleasant experiences of my military life."

One day on board an officer having been selected to dine with the king missed his invitation, and not knowing of the honor went as usual to the big mess room for his evening meal. He had just eaten his fill when the courier came to tell him the royal family was awaiting him in the dining room. He had dined sumptuously, but there was nothing else for it, and he had to eat another dinner.

Queen Elizabeth won the hearts of the sailors when she appeared at the games in honor of her son wearing one of the little round white hats the jacks like so well to wear in summer. She had draped it with a white veil, but through the gauze the sailors saw the mark of their rank, and they were immensely pleased.

Prince Leopold saw all there was to see about the ship. He is still a student at Eaton, but was given leave in order that he might accompany his parents to America. He is a quiet, bright-eyed boy of 18, with a pleasant smile and a perfect command of English. He is fond of athletics, but admitted one day, while chatting with the correspondents on deck, that he is an expert in none. His eyes sparkled when asked what he most desired to see in America, and he promptly answered the "Rocky Mountains and the delta of the Mississippi."

Prince Leopold has no position in the army, other than that of a private soldier in the Twelfth Infantry, the uniform of which he wears. His blouse is cut to the regulation, and on his sleeves is the numeral "12". When he has completed his classical education in England, it is understood he will enter the Belgian military college, after which he will be eligible to a commission. Until then, however, he is "Private, the Duke of Brabant."
