CEDAR MOUNT ACADEMY

I afterward learned to love him), the Moods and scores of others. There I saw and heard for the only time that eccentric preacher, Lucius Bellinger. I can see him yet standing in the pulpit. I must have been quite small for the only thing he said that I remember was a frequent repetition of the phrase, "I fancy, my brethren." I presume I was too young to take in his discourse, but it was the first time I ever heard "I fancy" and I shall carry that much of the old preacher's sermon to my grave.

Mount Bethel was the church of the Souths, Pools, Sullivans, McCulloughs, Gambrells, Epps, Gilkersons and Woods. They were a great people. Jodie McCullough, one of the eminent lawyers of the state and now of Baltimore, was from this church.

One of the remarkable features of this old camping ground was the great spring the waters of which were so strongly impregnated with lime that the horses refused to drink it until they were forced to do so from thirst. It boiled up from a basin at the foot of a steep declivity and formed a pool twenty feet in diameter and several feet deep, and running away formed a considerable creek. I remember that there were fish in the spring. Across this spring there was always a bridge way of thick plank. I have stood and watched an almost interminable line of negro cooks and waiting men file across this bridge, plunge their buckets into the spring and pass on. One dip filled them and after thousands of gallons had been dipped out there did not seem to be the least diminution in the out-flowing stream. Nor were the waters the least discolored by the continual splashing from morning till dark.

A few miles from Mount Bethel was Oak Hill Methodist church in Greenville county. Prominent among its members were the Epps, Scotts, Humberts, Sullivans, Gilkersons, Stokes, Chandlers, McDavids, Chapmans, Vances and Gambrells were among the first attendants of this church—a refined and gentle people.

Oak Hill was at first a union church and was given by Ransom Cobb, Esq., who owns a large tract of land adjoining the seven acres which he gave for church purposes—for the use of all denominations. The building was originally a small frame building unexcelled. The Baptists organized a church in this old building and worshipped there for many years but the church did not grow, that denomination, therefore, abandoned its efforts to maintain an organization at that point. During the year 1855 there was an unprecedented revival at Mount Bethel. The effects of this great awakening reached and permeated the neighborhood of Oak Hill. A brush arbor was built there and the ministers who had conducted the revival at Mount Bethel went, at the solicitation of the community, over to Oak Hill about the middle of September of that year and conducted a meeting for two weeks. The first woman who connected herself with the church was Phoebe A. Chandler, the mother of Mrs. L. T. H. Daniel, and the first male member was P. A. McDavid, then a lad. He still lives at Greenville. Robt. J. Smith, Col. James McCullough and T. Stokes transferred their membership from Mount Bethel and with Mrs. Theresa McDavid, a woman of large intellect and devoted to every good cause, with the members received at the revival organized the Oak Hill Methodist church.

The ministers who conducted the revival were Thomas Raysor, Judge Glenn, Addison P. Martin, an uncle of W. S. Martin of the Upper South Carolina Conference, John Humbert, the father of the sainted J. B. Humbert and Joseph Humbert, who still lives in the vicinity of Mount Bethel, and James F. Smith, the father of Dr. Charles F. Smith, of Michigan University. The Baptists transferred their rights in the property to the zeal and consecration of those goodly men who conducted the great revival.

SAYS CONFEDERATE SEAL IS IN EUROPE

Henry Watterson Reveals Bit of History Concerning Its Disappearance. Louisville, Ky., April 22.—Henry Watterson today revealed a bit of history in connection with the stories of the disappearance of the Great Seal of the Confederacy, about which much has been written recently, and gave it as his belief that the original seal is somewhere in Europe, probably in England.

Mr. Watterson has one of the six original copies of the Great Seal. "It was obtained in this way," he said today at his home at Mansfield, near Louisville.

"When Judah P. Benjamin left this country forever, to locate in London, he entrusted the Great Seal to his secretary, a man named Bromwell. A year or two after the war, Bromwell became my father's law clerk in Washington City. My father had the copies made and Bromwell retained the seal. Sometime later Bromwell went to London to join Mr. Benjamin, who took care of him until he died, sometime in the '50s.

"He took the seal to England with him, I have no doubt it was in his effects and that it now reposes somewhere over on the other side."

Mr. Watterson is widely known as the former editor of the Louisville

Courier Journal.

A seal, widely accepted by authorities as the original, is in the Confederate Museum at Richmond, Va.

Contradict Story

Richmond, Va., April 22.—Authorities here on Confederate history state that all doubt has been cleared as to the authenticity of the Great Seal of the Confederacy now to be seen in the Confederate Museum in Richmond.

The recent story of the Great Seal emanating from Washington to the effect that an old negro died there with the secret of the hiding place of the seal was received with interest in Richmond.

Confederate authorities here do not doubt Colonel Watterson's statement that he possesses a copy of the seal, but they do take issue with him in his assertion that the original seal is across the Atlantic, for it is known here that the instrument in possession of the Confederate Museum is genuine.

The seal in Richmond was taken to England several years ago and shown to the nephew and successor of the engraver who made the seal. This engraver, Allen J. Wyon, furnished J. St. George Bryan, who took it to England, with a certificate attesting it to be the one his uncle made—the original Great Seal of the Confederacy.

It was presented to the Confederate Museum in 1912 and is viewed by hundreds daily.

"Found Seven Rats Dead in Bin Next Morning."

Robert Woodruff says: "My premises were infested with rats. I tried RAT-SNAP on friend's recommendation. Next morning found seven dead rats in bin, two near feed box, three in stall. Found large number since. No smell from dead rats—RAT-SNAP dries them up. Best thing I have ever used." Three sizes, 35c, 65c, $1.25.
