DANIEL FAMILY REUNION

The Daniel family, descendants of Harrison Daniel, who came from Virginia shortly after the Revolutionary war and settled near Ware Shoals are scattered from New York to Texas, having representatives in every state intervening.

Last week M. H. R. L. and J. Walter Daniel of Spartanburg and Winston-Salem, N. C., came down to visit the old homeplace of Jesse H. Daniel, their father at which J. Kelly Daniel now resides. After getting here and looking around they concluded to invite all the relatives in reach, to the home of Kelly Daniel to hold a reunion of the Daniels. They gathered from Spartanburg, Greenville, Laurens and other places and on Sunday morning attended Sunday School at Kings Chapel Methodist church, one of the family being superintendent. All joined in the services, singing, prayer and talking of the scenes of the past.

Returning to the home of Kelly Daniel where a long table was spread under the shade trees in the yard, soon filled with luscious fruits, cakes and cookies of all kinds and all invited to partake. It was a splendid feast and all enjoyed it. The afternoon was spent in conversation reminiscent of youthful days. Days of the older ones spent at the old school houses, Cedar Mount, Cedar Grove and Mt. Ga-zaher, taught by one of the family for thirty-odd years, viz., L. T. H. Daniel.

After music and prayer they all joined in singing "God be with you 'till we meet again." Good-byes were said and we all wended our ways homeward, numbering this as one of the most pleasant days of our lives, hoping to meet again under similar circumstances sometime within another twelve months. Those present were Mrs. Laura D. Jones, Anna S. J. Daniel, W. Y. Watkins, Caddie Bell Pitts, Mrs. W. H. Daniel, Fay Daniel, Leonard Daniel, Annie May Foster, Florence Manly, Clara Hammett, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Daniel, Nora Pitts, Wal-and Mrs. J. W. HUGE INCREASE IN FEDERAL REVENUE

Import Taxes Will Total $100,000,000 More This Year Than Ever Before.

Washington, Nov. 9.—A federal revenue of approximately $445,000,000 this fiscal year from import taxes, or about $100,000,000 more than ever before in the nation's history, was forecast today by customs officials on the basis of returns under the new tariff act for a month and a half of its operation and the almost unprecedented income which immediately preceded enactment of the measure, when there were heavy withdrawals from bonded warehouses and a rush of imports to avoid the higher duties carried in the new law.

The actual revenue for the first month was $40,868,266, or at the rate of nearly $500,000,000 a year. Officials said this was the first time that customs receipts had reached $40,000,000 in the month of enactment of a new tariff. They expect some recession from this monthly total, but said there was little or no indication of the slump in imports which usually has occurred during the first six months or year after imposition of protective rates.

Two explanations are offered. One is the abnormal foreign exchange and world economic conditions and the other the recovery of the country before passage of the Fordney-McCumber act from the after-the-war industrial depression and attendant buyers' strike.

Were there to be any great depression in import trade it would be manifesting itself by this time, according to these officials. Instead of any such manifestation, they declare that foreign goods are reaching the country in increasing quantities as evidenced by the congestion in the appraisers' stores at the port of New York.

ALL FEAR SNAKES

Members of Uncle Sam's Forestry Service Protected.

Never Without Antidote That is Said to Render Bite of Even the Rattler Innocuous.

Uncle Sam's forestry service is ever on the watch against rattlesnakes in the national forests. Arrangements were some time ago perfected for the arming of forest officers and fire-fighters against snake bites.

The weapon provided for them is a small combination tool containing a sharp steel lancet and a receptacle to hold permanganate of potash, which is declared to be the best antidote for snake bites. This remedy may not be altogether popular in districts where from time immemorial the old-time favorite remedy, whisky, is held to have no equal, but, nevertheless, the official sanction has been given permanganate.

The necessity for furnishing forest officers with adequate means of protection against attacks by snakes has time and again been strikingly demonstrated in the case of big forest fires. After the fires were thought extinguished and the men withdrawn it was discovered that the fire had broken out again. Squads of men were dispatched immediately to fight them and on their way they ran into a regiment or two of rattlesnakes. In one case it seemed as if the brush was literally alive with snakes. The men consumed the greater part of six hours fighting snakes before they could get through to the fire. Several of the men were bitten.

Officials of the forestry service assert that rattlesnakes are as plentiful in Montana as in southern California forests and in sections of the southern Appalachians, acquired in 1915 under the Weeks law.

The little tool with which the forest guards are armed can be carried conveniently in the vest pocket, being only a trifle larger than an ordinary fountain pen and not as long. Individual employees of the United States Geological Survey have been using these little tools for a long time and with great success.

Field parties of geologists frequently run across snakes. If armed with these vest pocket first-aid instruments, a bitten man quickly opens up the wound with the lancet, shakes in a little of the antidote and resumes his work, apparently none the worse for the attack.

Timber survey crews of the forestry service frequently battle with snakes. It is believed that they have the worst time of all in this relation.

A Troubled Conscience.

A Norwegian, John Larson by name, a lumberman had a couple of Swedes working for him. One day one of the Swedes got a little fresh and the Norwegian threw him into the river. Then the other Swede got into an argument with him, and he, too, went into the river and was drowned.

In about six years John's conscience began to bother him. He went down to the sheriff, Ole Oleson, and said:

"Ola, sax yar ago Ay kill a couple Swides, and my conscience is begin to bother. What skoll Ay do?"

"Vell, I dunno, John. Ay bane sheriff only 18 months and dunno the rules. You better go and see Knute Nelson, the county clerk. Maybe he know what to do."

So John proceeded to the county clerk's office, and there unloaded his troubled mind. Knute, after hearing the story, took down a big book, rushed through its pages, then took down another book, and studied it. Finally, looking a bit puzzled, he spoke up:

"There ain't no bounty on them," he said.—Exchange.

Alarming.

A certain actor who shall be nameless here but who has been known for his matrimonial adventures, one day approached a physician and asked for a thorough physical examination.

"I want to see that I'm fit for a good many years yet, doc," he said. "You know I'm to be married again soon, for the fifth time."

"H-m-m," muttered the examiner as he put the stethoscope to the actor's heart. "Of course this fifth lady is the only girl in the world for you, and this is positively your last matrimonial venture?"

"Oh, come, doctor," cried the thespian, much alarmed. "I'm not as bad off as that, am I?"—American Legion Weekly.

Altogether Too Tame.

One was twelve and the other was eleven—Ethel and May let's call them, because those are not their names. They had their usual weekly one afternoon at the movies and, as it was their custom to sit through the reel for a second showing, they were not expected home at the hour they showed up.

"What was the matter with the show that you didn't see it through twice?" was asked.

"Oh," was the bored reply, "the man was married and had a family and there was no lovmaking."

No Fish Stories for Him.

"Why don't you take a rest and go fishing?"

"I never go fishing," replied Senator Sorghum. "A man in my position has trouble enough in keeping up his reputation for strict veracity without jeopardizing it in pratine."
