EDITORIAL NOTES.

Governor Lee has replied Christmas until the 13th January next.

Judge T. R. Fraser was re-elected judge of the 3rd Circuit, without opposition on the 13th inst.

The Master ordered some valuable land for sale in different sections of the county for sale in January.

Farmer Tullman's Bill to reorganize the department of agriculture has been defeated in the House of Representatives.

We acknowledge the receipt of the annual report of the Commissioner of Agriculture, Norman C. Coleman, and of the Secretary of the Interior.

We see that Senator Hampton has introduced a bill to punish cock fighting within three miles of any chartered institution of learning in the State.

The bill to reorganize the State for a year in the South Carolina State has passed to a committee in the Senate.

The ordinance of the city council prohibiting the sale of any of the State is a step in the right direction.

The Newberry delegates who signed against the bill to allow a reassessment of the property in the city of Newberry.

The Prosperity Trial Justice replies to farmer Gallman today, and we think shows that he did all the law required of him in the matter.

We think that the Directors of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Columbia have made a mistake in electing Rev. J. L. Girardeau, D. D., to fill the chair, from which they removed Dr. Woodrow.

The bill to reduce the salaries of School Commissioners to two hundred dollars a year and to allow a mileage of five cents a mile for actual travel.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

President Cleveland's message to Congress, which we gave in full last week, is a veritable public document.

It gives a large amount of valuable information about the affairs of our government, and shows what has been done by the Democratic administration to improve every department, and sound suggestions for still further improvement.

The report is a credit to the President, and shows that the money is taken from the pockets and locked up in the Treasury when the necessities of the Government do not require it.

It is an injustice to the tax payer of the country that Congress should so promptly remedy the President's policy in this connection, when more of the people's confidence is cast through the form of taxation than necessary to meet the just obligations of the Government.

TEACHERS' DEPARTMENT.

ARTHUR B. BAKER, Editor.

The School Commissioners are again in the line, and some day when you go out into the woods, or to the edge of the water, you will see a young man or woman who has been trained in the school, and who is now engaged in the noble work of preparing a young man or woman for the future.

The preparatory department of the college is gradually increasing in numbers, and it is a proof of the efficiency of the instruction. Another year will soon begin and those who intend sending their sons to this or any other department of the college had better let them commence with the beginning of the year.

It is supposed that the learner has already become familiar with the different marks, if he has not they should be taught without delay.

The Dictionary as a text book in schools is losing the place it once held. Many preparatory schools are found in which it has fallen into disuse.

Correct pronunciation is almost as necessary in connection with public speaking as correct sentences.

Our language is not so defective, however, as to give every man the right to pronounce a syllable or fancy word without dictation.

In the next issue will be found a programme for the Teachers' Association which meets on the 1st Saturday in January next.
