MRS. VANDERBILT'S HOME.

How the Richest Woman in America Passes her Leisure Time.

New York Correspondence of the Philadelphia Times.] Mrs. Vanderbilt, the widow of William H. Vanderbilt, is the richest woman in America. Next to Queen Victoria, she is the richest woman in the world. She and her son George, the only unmarried child, with a large staff of servants, occupy the huge brown-stone palace at the corner of 5th avenue and 51st street.

In many respects Mrs. Vanderbilt leads a very simple life, exactly as hundreds of other women who have not a hundredth part of her money. She breakfasts between 8 and 9 o'clock, the meal consisting of fruit, porridge, steak, chops, or broiled chicken, warm rolls, tea and coffee. George Vanderbilt breakfasts with his mother, so that she shall not be alone. Her luncheon is also a comparatively simple meal, but at dinner there is much ceremony, and there are usually guests. The dining room is situated on the first floor, with windows looking out on 51st street. There is an immense fireplace with carved oaken designs in bas-relief at one end of the room, opposite the door leading from the Japanese room, which has recently had a billiard table placed in the centre. The dining room is furnished with all oaken furniture. A buffet fills one entire side of the room, and on the other, between the window, are large glass cabinets, in which is the finest collection of old Sevres and other rare porcelain. When I lunched with her the other day the table was set for eight people and the service was of Dresden china. On each plate was a large white napkin so folded as to show an embroidered monogram about an inch and a half square of the letters W. H. V. At the four corners of the table were tall single silver candlesticks, with pink candles and pink silk shades, and in front of these small silver dishes for bonbons, salted almonds, elives, &c. The glassware was finely cut and sparkled like diamonds, and on the buffet stood other specimens of cut glass ready for use. It all shone like a collection of huge gems. In the centre of the table stood a large cut-glass bowl of rare workmanship filled with chrysanthemiuns from Mrs. Vanderbilt's own conservatory, which just now contains an immensely beautiful display of these autumnal flowers. Just outside the dining room is a store room, with safes built into the try. There is a balcony, with a wrought pieces of silver. There are silver punch bowls, tankards, candlesticks, tureens. all exquisitely engraved and of immense size. One safe contains only immense silver trays, and one tray especially large, has a ttny railing an inch high surrounding it and large showy handles. It is said to be the largest and finest engraved piece of silver plate in the country. Another safe contains a solid gold dinner service and tall gold candlesticks. There are few people of royal blood who can excel in their table appointments this New York widow. In the balcony row of safes the smaller pieces of silver are kept; spoons of every kind and variety, ladies, knives, forks and small dishes. They are in gold, silver and plantinum.

One may very naturally ask what does so small a family as Mrs. Vanderbilt and her son George do with this immense amount of silver, glass and porcelain? As I have said, the dinner s the one ceremonious occasion of the day, and each day the butler is requested to set the table with entirely different service of plate, glass and china. I do not say that there are 365 of these sets, but there are enough to last for a long time before beginning over again. In this way Mrs. Vanderbilt learns that such of her possessions are intact. It seems a great responsibility for one man to have charge of all these possessions, yet the butler of the family is that man and he is required to give bonds as to his faithfulness. He it is He also urged a conciliatory policy with who holds the keys to all these safes and cabinets, and he is not only responsible for their safe keeping, but he is accountable for any breakage. The evolve a new South by the introduction present butler has been in the family of capital and energy. This change in some time and previously held the same position with Oaket Ames, now Governor of Massachusetts.

Gen. Harrison Hard at Work on his Address-His Letters Yesterday.

Indianapolis, December 27.—Gen Harrison has been busy at work all day in his library, stopping long enough, however, to have a conference with several callers. Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, came last night, presumably in the interest of Senator Allison for a cabinet position, as well as to look after other matters. He declined to say anything for publication further than that the tariff bill will pass the Senate, but probably not the House, and that he does not believe there will be an extra session.
