ATLANTA'S BIG PENDULUM.

A mouble Motion Showing the Earth's Revolution. ATLANTA, Ga., April 6.- The longest pendulum on this continent swings at the Technological school in Atlanta. It is a heavy piece of iron, pear shaped, and attached to a brass wire 42 feet

ong. The upper end of the wire is pivoted in a steel point, which rests on the centre of a steel plate, so as to cause the least possible friction.

Directly under the pendulum is a large circle divided into twenty-four sections of 15 degrees each, corresponding to the distance traversed by the sun in an hour. The North Pole is placed directly under the pendulum, and the meridians of longitude are drawn to meet there. The parallels of latitude make smaller circles inside the other. Dr. I. S. Hopkins, the president of the school, who made and put up the pendulum, makes the experiment as follows: The iron is brought to the edge of the circle on the meridian of Atlanta; and let swing across to the other side. Apparently it swings straight across the circle, but gradually it traverses the parallels of latitude from North to East in a direction opposite to the revolution of the earth. pendulum, not being directly over the axis of the earth, does not move in exactly the same time, but fall- 'ehind.
