Lecture on Matrimony.

This all-important and most popular subject now (as ever) on the tapis was discussed by the Hon. Y. J. Pope last Friday night.

The speaker did not linger at the trysts of the nations to tell their styles. How the proud Castilian came to wed the Moorish maiden; whether the mercenary lover of La Belle France more or less ardent than his neighbor across the channel, by the lakes of Killarney or under the blue mists of the Mourne.

Whether the merry wives of Albion are as petite and graceful or so queenly as the representative daughters of Columbia, and all that. He had no time for this. He had matters of moment to talk about and no time to spare.
